'51 Car Sales Are Stopped By GM in Price Protest

Easing of Rollback Order Asked of U. S.; Chrysler, Ford, Nash Indicate No Move

DETROIT, Dec. 18 (AP).—General Motors Corp. stopped the sale of 1951 model autos today.

The world's biggest car producer reportedly asked the Government to modify its order rolling back prices on new cars to the Dec. 1 level.

After GM took its new cars off the market, Economic Stabilization officials in Washington said they had been advised that the corporation was telegraphing to Washington details of its proposal for modification of the rollback.

General Motors officials declined immediate comment on the report.

DiSalle Given Views

A spokesman for the Economic Stabilization Agency in Washington said Price Stabilizer Michael V. DiSalle has already been given "rough details" of GM's ideas.

The corporation notified its Chevrolet, Pontiac and Cadillac dealers that until further notice all cars delivered to them on or after today will remain the property of GM and are not to be sold until further notice.

The action was taken, GM said, "pending an examination of the discriminatory order of the Economic Stabilization Agency affecting passenger car prices, including the possible effect . . . on wages."

Last Saturday the agency ordered car prices cut back to December 1 levels. This affected increases announced by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Buick, Cadillac, all Chrysler divisions, Ford, Mercury and Lincoln and Nash.

Whether Ford, Chrysler and Nash would follow the GM action was not immediately indicated.

There was no immediate reaction from the White House.

Also withholding comment was Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO United Auto Workers. After the price rollback order Reuther said his union would fight to retain advantages obtained in new wage agreements with the auto industry. He referred specifically to the cost-of-living clauses that automatically move up wages as living costs mount and also to annual wage-improvement provisions.

Wire to Workers

Soon after its wire to dealers, GM gave out a telegram to unions representing its workers. The wire to the unions said the price rollback action "places in jeopardy" all phases of the new five-year wage agreements.

A price freeze, General Motors said, "would seem" under the defense production act to "require an equally arbitrary wage freeze." C. E. Wilson, GM president, said, that the corporation intends to do everything possible to preserve its labor agreements."

The earlier telegram from General Motors went to Chevrolet, Pontiac and Cadillac dealers only, because these divisions are shipping 1951 models. Buick and Oldsmobile still are assembling 1950 models. The latter models were not affected by GM's approximately 5-percent price boost.

The telegram read:

"Pending an examination of the discriminatory order of the Economic Stabilization Agency affecting passenger car prices, including the possible effect of this order on wages, all 1951 model passenger cars shipped to you on or after today, if accepted by you, will be upon consignment and will remain the property of General Motors Corp. They are not to be sold until released from consignment.

"With respect to 1951 passenger cars delivered to you by the division of General Motors Corp. prior to your receipt of this telegram and with respect to which title has passed to you, these are your property and the disposition thereof in the light of Price Regulation No. 1 or any future Government action must be determined by you."

Police, FBI Recover $28,005 Of $64,176 Bank Holdup Loot

By Alfred E. Lewis and Jean Reiff

Washington police and FBI agents have recovered $28,005 of the $64,176 stolen in the holdups of two Washington banks, the FBI revealed yesterday.

Armed with search warrants, obtained earlier in the day, the officers were able to enter safety deposit vaults at a Washington bank and an Arlington bank, where they found $10,545 deposited by two of the hold-up suspects.

Three men have been arrested and charged with the $35,825 holdup of the Spring Valley branch of the National Metropolitan Bank December 7 and the $28,351 holdup of the Shepherd Park branch of the Hamilton National Bank last February.

The rest of the money recovered was found either on their persons or in their rooms at the time of their arrest, police said.

The suspects are Leon Miskin, 22, of 509 Nicholson st. nw., and Nicholas James Carrigan, 22, of 513 8th st. ne., both arrested in Washington Saturday. The third man, Christopher Tassos, 34, was arrested in Hollywood Friday night.

The FBI yesterday gave this breakdown of the cash which has been recovered:

A total of $8445 was recovered in the Arlington Bank's safety deposit vault, where it had been deposited by Carrigan under an alias. He was identified through pictures as the renter of the box.

Another $2100 was recovered in the Washington bank's safety deposit vault, where it had been placed by Miskin. In each case part of the money recovered was identified by serial numbers as part of the loot taken from the National Metropolitan Bank's branch.

Tassos, when arrested, was carrying $3599 with him. The amount included thirty-five $100 bills. In his hotel room FBI agents found $5100 in bills in 17 packages.

When police arrested Miskin,

Excess Profits Levy Plus

Senate Committee Approves $3.2 Billion Emergency Tax

The Senate Finance Committee last night unanimously reported a $3,200,000,000 emergency tax bill combining an excess profits tax with 2 percent increase in regular corporation income taxes.

Profits tax features of the measure, retroactive to July 1, roughly follow the lines of the House-approved bill. This imposed a 75 per cent levy on profits in excess of 85 percent of average earnings in the best three of the four years, 1946-49.

Combined tax features of the Senate bill actually have the effect of imposing a 77 percent profits tax, though the Finance Committee eased the impact of the levy and wrote in many more relief provisions than the House.

Before ordering the bill reported last night the committee voted not to make the new step-up from 45 to 47 percent in regular corporation income rates retroactive to July 1.

Under the eleventh hour change the 2 percent hike would become effective only for taxable years beginning "after" July 1.

Since three fourths of all corporations compute their taxes on a calendar year basis, no part of the 1950 income of most companies would be subject to the 47 percent rate.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) predicted the Senate version of the bill would still yield from two to three hundred million dollars more than the House measure in its first full year of operation.

He said revenue from it might climb to four billion dollars or more in the second year.

George said the bill probably will be called up in the Senate on Wednesday and predicted it would be passed and returned to the House the following day. He voiced doubt, however, that final action can be had on the tax conference report before Christmas.

House leaders have been driving to wind up all short session business by Saturday night, but George said that even if conferees made the necessary speed it is questionable a quorum will be present this weekend.

He repeated his forecast that the White House will get "some kind of an excess profits tax bill" for signature before the Eighty-first Congress expires, however.

In voting what amounts to a 77 percent excess profits tax, in combination with a new 47 percent regular income rate, the Senate group placed a 60 percent "ceiling" on over-all tax collections from any one company. The House had voted a 67 percent ceiling.

Corporations would have the option of computing the tax by either the averaging earnings method, using 1946-49 earnings as a base, or choosing an alternative credit of 8 to 12 percent of their invested capital.

The Senate bill is studded with provisions designed to ease the impact of the levy on "growing" companies and on public utilities and transportation systems which are subject to rate regulation.

House Passes Compromise Yugoslav Bill

$38 Millions Food Aid Gets Shouted Okay; Is Sent to Senate

The House shouted its approval yesterday of a compromise bill to give Yugoslavia 38 million dollars in additional food aid to support Marshal Tito in his defiance of the Kremlin.

The measure now goes to the Senate where swift approval is expected.

The United States already has given Yugoslavia about $31,400,000 worth of emergency aid to relieve near-famine conditions resulting from a critical drought.

The new money will be transferred from funds already appropriated by Congress for the European Recovery Plan.

President Truman made aid to Tito one of his highest priority requests during the current lame duck session. He said Tito's 32 divisions are the strongest anti-Russian force in western Europe today.

The bill was amended in the House to force Yugoslavia to do everything possible to meet its own food needs, including curtailing exports to other countries if necessary.

Tito has agreed to permit United States officials and newspapermen to see that the relief food is distributed fairly and that it is clearly labeled as a gift of the United States.

Stock Prices Up As Trading Hits Near-Record Pace

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Prospects of the greatest industrial effort in American history brought a flood of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The day's volume of 4,490,000 shares was the second highest in 11 years. It was exceeded this year only by the 4,860,000 shares transferred June 27, right after the start of the Korean war.

Over 150 individual stocks soared to new 1950 high prices today. The best gainers included aircraft, steel, railroad and oil issues.

Prices advnaced in the major commodity markets also.

Wool tops were up as much as 8½ cents, cotton advanced $1.70 to $3.10 a bale, grains pushed ahead from fractions to 5½ cents a bushel on some types.

Korean Action

TOKYO (Tuesday), Dec. 19 (AP).—Two American outposts for the tiny Hungnam beachhead in northeast Korea were penetrated briefly last night by banzai charges of Chinese and North Korean Reds, blowing bugles and whistles.

A field dispatch today from the the beachhead—the last Allied toehold in that sector—said the positions were restored quickly at the norhtwest portion of the little perimeter.

Four Banzai attacks hit the beachhead during the night and all were reported beaten back.

"Big Mo" in Action

Buildup of Red might indicated that the Chinese Communist Twentieth Army has arrived in force in the beachhead area.

The might of suporting United Nations naval units offshore also was increasing.

The big battleship Missouri, with guns capable of firing more than 20 miles, went into action.

The 11,000-ton aircraft carrier Bataan arrived with Marine Fighter Squadron 212 and Marine Aircraft Group 33. Its planes joined those from the carriers Princeton and Philippine Sea in killing 850 Reds during close support attacks.

Pressure "Medium to Heavy"

Air power also was stepped up on the ground-quiet west Korean front where the fastest American jet plane, the F-86 Sabre, was in action. Sunday one jet shot down a Russian-built MIG-15 jet.

A United States Tenth Corps spokesman said today that the Chinese Reds, reinforced by Communist North Korean troops, still have not struck the Hungnam beachhead in force, but were "exerting medium to heavy pressure."

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton reported that North Korean Reds made persistent attacks in 100-man strength.

The two attacks which achieved a brief penetration of outposts were made in company-strength.

The four attacks last night were supported by mortars and machineguns.

Red Artillery Knocked Out

Marine pilots said they knocked out four artillery positions. Since artillery is attached only to a Red Chinese army and not a division, this was taken to mean that the Chinese Red Twentieth Army has arrived near the beachhead.

Big enemy troop concentrations were reported in the Chigyong sector three miles southwest of Hamhung. Air observers also saw 20 to 30 vehicles moving north from Wonsan, 50 miles south of Hungnam's port.

The nine, 16-inch and twenty, five-inch guns of the Missouri joined during last night in a naval bombardment of Red forces. United States Third Division artil-

WORLD'S FASTEST—America's F-86 Sabre jets, one of which is shown here in a training flight, went into action in the Korean combat for the first time Sunday. Almost immediately Lieut. Col. Bruce H. U. N. Group Sending Plea To Peiping

Cease-Fire Committee May Travel to See Red Chinese Leaders

LAKE SUCCESS, Dec. 18 (AP).—United Nations truce negotiators have appealed directly to Peiping for a meeting to discuss a cease-fire in Korea. They indicated a willingness to go to Peiping or anywhere else to talk over the plea.

Lester B. Pearson of Canada told the 60-member Assembly Political Committee today that it was still too soon to expect an answer. The appeal went out Saturday but was disclosed only today.

The committee adjourned all its work until the negotiators have something new to report. It refused to heed Jacob A. Malik's demands to take up Russian charges that the United States' Formosa policy makes it guilty of aggression toward Red China.

Pearson, Sir Benegal N. Rau of India and Assembly President Nasrollah Entezam of Iran are the cease-fire negotiators.

Pearson declined to speculate what Red China's answer may be. Several top delegations expect an answer. They do not look for the Chinese Communists to ignore the plea entirely.

Some foresaw a final answer along the line of the statements made by Wu Hsiu-chuan, head of the Communist Chinese mission here to discuss the Formosa question. Wu and his aides have refused to meet the U. N. negotiators on an official basis. Pearson said they pleaded they lacked authority to talk anything but Formosa.

But Wu told reporters Saturday

AN ADVANCE U. S. BASE, KOREA, Dec. 17 (Delayed), (AP).—An F-86 Sabre jet bagged a Russian-made MIG-15 today in the first battle test of America's newest and fastest operational fighting plane.

The enemy jet, aflame, was seen spinning out of control. Lieut. Col. Bruce Hinton of Stockton, Calif., made the kill in a five-minute battle between four F-86 Sabres and four MIG-15s near the Manchurian border south of Sinuiju.

The other three MIG-15s streaked to safety across the Yalu River into Manchuria.

Returning to his base, Hinton made a victory roll over the runway and the cheering men on the ground knew the answer to a question they had been asking since the Sabres arrived December 15: How would they rate in battle against the speedy MIG-15s?

[Colonel Hinton's wife and two children formerly lived in Washington, at 5509 Parkland ct. se., according to the Air Force. They now live in Stockton.—Editor's Note.]

"The Best There Is"

The 6-foot Hinton, 31, was grinning when he climbed out of his plane.

"I caught him and let him have it and down he went," he said. "The Sabre is the best there is."

Reputedly the world's fastest jet not still in the experimental class, the North American-built Sabre has swept-back wings and tail. It holds the world's operational speed record of 670.981 miles per hour — which is not necessarily its actual top performance.

The MIG-15 is fast—over 600 miles per hour—but just how fast isn't known.

Sunday's battle definitely indicated the Sabre is faster.

"I was sure hoping to get an MIG," said Hinton. "Matter of fact, I told the boys just before I took off to get a Red Star ready to put on my plane."

Flew "Slow" to Fool Them

He said the enemy planes were fooled because the Sabres deliberately flew at "slow" speed, at first.

"We were at 25,000 feet when we spotted them at 18,000 feet, flying level or slightly climbing and going very fast," he related.

"We headed down on them. They started a hard turn to the West European Force to Include 55 Divisions Is Agreed On

BRUSSELS, Dec. 18 (AP). Cabinet ministers of the 12 Atlantic Pact nations announced tonight they have approved firm steps to form an international army, including Germans, for the defense of western Europe against communist aggression.

This step, in defiance of threats from the Soviet Union, was taken at a three-hour meeting this afternoon behind closed doors. A final decision will be announced Tuesday.

55 to 60 Divisions

Conference officials said the plans call for 55 to 60 divisions and air and sea forces, totaling at least one million men by the end of 1953.

There was little if any doubt that the man to be picked to command this unified force will be Gen. Dwight Eisenhower. The Ministers will ask President Truman to name Eisenhower to the job.

Diplomatic informants said the plan also permits West Germany to form her own air force. Its precise size was not disclosed, but these informants said the German air arm would be made up mostly of fighter planes with some fighter-bombers. This would give German combat teams the close air support they would need in event they go into action.

Under the plan the West Germans would contribute about 25 combat teams of 6000 men each. In return the Bonn regime would be given political and economic concessions by occupying powers but not full immediate independence, the informants said.

Two Deputies Likely

Eisenhower, the Allied World War II supreme commander, will probably have two or three deputies—at least one Briton and one Frenchman. Mentioned among possibilities for deputies are Lieut. Gen. Alphonse Juin, resident-general of Morocco, and Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, chief U. S. Army planning officer.

There were two meetings here today—one of defense ministers in the morning and another this afternoon of the defense ministers with the foreign ministers, including Secretary of State Dean Acheson. It was after the second meeting that it was disclosed approval had been given for formation of the international army to include Germans.

After appointment of a commander, the member nations are expected to begin committing units to the new force at once. Britain is reported already preparing an armored division for Europe, and the United States target is said to be four or five divisions within the next year or so.

Two Plans Approved

Defense ministers of the 12 Nations met this morning behind sealed doors in the gray stone palace of the Brabant provincial government in the same room where the Allies divided up the German war fleet four years ago.

Today they approved two plans. One was for participation of up to 150,000 Germans in a European army, which had been prepared by the foreign ministers' deputies.

The other plan, drawn up by the Military Committee of chiefs of staff, outlined the organization of such a force, provided for an American commander and drew the lines of his authority.

The defense ministers heard United States Secretary of the Army Frank Pace warn that the Atlantic partners are "far from ready" to meet any Communist aggression in Europe. He said "in the United States all our efforts are now being geared to expedite organization of our military forces and production of munitions."

He urged that Europe "share with us an appreciation of the urgency of the situation."

Chairman Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium declared the meeting "may have a vital effect on the future of the free world."

After a quick lunch, the defense ministers met with the foreign ministers, including Secretary Acheson, whose plane was delayed because of bad weather.

2-Month Extension Of D. C. Rent Law Clears Congress

Congress yesterday gave final approval to extending District rent control from January 31 through March 31, 1951.

The two-month extension, previously approved by the Senate, cleared the House by unanimous consent on the motion of District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.). The bill now goes to the White House.

The House also approved and returned to the Senate a bill to strengthen the powers of Juvenile Court here in enforcing support of illegitimate children by their fathers. The Senate has approved the bill, but now must review a number of House language changes.

Senate Shelves GOP Demand Over Truman-Attlee Parleys

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Democrats yesterday hit back at Republican attacks on Administration foreign policy in grave appeals to the Senate for national unity "at this time of peril."

The Senate responded by sidetracking a GOP resolution requiring Senate clearance of any agreements reached between President Truman and British Prime Minister Attlee.

The resolution was sent to a probable pigeon-hole in the Foreign Relations Committee by an almost party-line vote of 47 to 29. Earlier the Senate refused 45 to 30 to instruct the committee to immediately report it back.

Democrats to a man voted to sidetrack the resolution. Only three Republicans voted with them—Chan Gurney (S. Dak.), Leverett Saltonstall (Mass.) and Margaret Chase Smith (Me.).

One Southern and one border State Democrat, who have been among the Administration's critics in the past, meanwhile appealed to Republicans to drop their personalized foreign policy attacks and "work together" with Democrats through the crisis.

Senator J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) accused Republicans of a campaign of "personal vilification" and "character assassination" that is playing directly into the hands of Russia. He referred particularly to the House and Senate GOP resolutions demanding the replacement of Secretary of State Dean Acheson, but cited other instances of attacks on "the patriotism and character of persons."

Fulbright termed the GOP course "extremely dangerous . . . misguided and irresponsible" and said it "smacks of Nazi totalitarianism."

Said the Arkansas Democrat:

"Suspicion and hatred and distrust have a way of spreading like the plague. Once they are aroused, they are not easy to eradicate. If the infection spreads too far and too deep, such confusion and distrust may result that only a man on horseback can control the situation."

Soviet Uses Nonunion Labor At Embassy, Carey of CIO Says

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, yesterday accused the Russian Embassy of employing "scab" labor to install fire hoses.

Carey, also president of the International Union of Electrical Workers, which recently was formed out of the left-wing United Electrical Workers, characterized the action as "flagrant hypocrisy" and said it proved Russia is "no friend of organized labor."

The union official said that the plumbers were asked to install emergency fire hoses on all floors, "presumably as a defense precaution against a possible bombing of Washington."

"There's a large touch of irony," Carey said in a statement bearing the IUE imprint, "in the Soviet Embassy's hiring nonunion labor for protective measures against bombing, because the only bombing the embassy has to fear is that which could come only from Soviet Russia."

A spokesman at the embassy said that he was "very sorry" that he could not comment last night. He urged a reporter to "please call tomorrow."

Emergency fire hoses are being installed in the embassy, at 1126 16th st. nw., by J. Shapiro, plumber, 3118 Georgia ave. nw.

A Navy veteran of World War II, Shapiro said he had employed union labor for 10 years, until a year ago. "I have as little use for communism as anyone else," he said yesterday, "but this contract was awarded by competitive bidding."

Make Dispersed Agencies Part Of Community, Planner Urges

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Dispersed Federal agencies should be the center of a series of complete communities, with homes and shops within walking distance of offices, a high-ranking planner recommended yesterday.

Clarence S. Stein, president of the Regional Development Council of America, said the proposed dispersal program didn't go far enough and unless it was broadened there would be trouble recruiting and retaining employes at the outlying units.

Stein, who has helped plan numerous communities around the country, told a Senate Public Works subcommittee on Public Buildings that Washington is "one of the tightest-mass cities in the country."

"You certainly can't have good living in a colossal city like Washington," Stein declared, and none of the Senators present disagreed.

He said present plans for building of office units only should be fitted into a program for erection of small towns—about 20,000 population or more—with homes so close to the office buildings that workers could walk or cycle to work.

Around each town—and thus far eight units of offices have been under consideration—would be a half-mile or mile-wide "green belt" of agricultural or recreation land to keep the towns from grow-

Meat Price Freeze Plan Now Denied

The Government yesterday said it does not plan an immediate meat-price freeze.

Economic Stablization Agency officials reported this after a day-long meeting with Packer representatives.

A statement issued after the session said:

"The meeting was not to be ttaken as an indication of any imminent controls on meats but it was purely an exploratory discussion to look into the situation."

Executives of five meat-packing companies were on hand, but they did not represent the country's largest firms such as Swift, Armour or Cudahy.

Price Stabilizer Michael V. Di Salle was the top Government official. His staff advisers as well as representatives of the Department of Agriculture were sitting in.

GM Slated to Continue '51 Output for Present

DETROIT, Dec. 18 (AP).—Unless it is of prolonged duration, General Motors' halting of 1951 model car sales is not likely to have any effect on its production program.

Issuance of the order led to immediate misunderstandings, as car buyers interpreted it to mean a suspension of production. This, according to informed circles, is not contemplated and would be unnecessary unless the suspension of sales were to continue for several weeks. GM has storage facilities for any vehicles the dealers might not want to accept "on consignment."

By Marshall Andrews
By the United Press

President Truman yesterday asked Congress for broader powers to meet the swiftly moving demands of mobilization.

In a letter to Vice President Barkley and House Speaker Sam Rayburn, the President sought restoration of two features of the First War Powers Act of 1941, which had been repealed by Congress in July, 1947. Mr. Truman asked power to:

1. Reorganize and rearrange Government functions and personnel and to set up emergency offices such as the War Manpower Commission and the War Shipping Administration of World War II.

2. Modify defense production contracts "to avoid undue delays in productions and to keep suppliers in business on Government work."

Conditions Reviewed

The President explained that Mobilization Director Charles E. Wilson already had begun reviewing the "scope and character" of the numerous offices over whose operations he will assume control.

"As soon as changes are found to be necessary," Mr. Truman wrote, "the President should be enabled to place them in effect. Delay would only hamper the over-all effort.

"When the emergency has ended, the agencies affected will revert to their present status, unless further action is taken by Congress."

The President promised that the new powers he requested, if granted," would not be used to make permanent changes in the organization of the Government."

Contract Power Asked

In the matter of authority to make changes in contracts, Mr. Truman pointed out that the recent declaration of national emergency gave him the power to make contracts without calling for bids. But there is "considerable doubt," he wrote, whether he is empowered to modify contracts after they have been made.

"It is already apparent," declared, "that the agencies responsible for defense production will need authority to modify existing contracts in order to avoid undue delays in production and to keep suppliers in business on Government work."

He explained that some suppliers are facing financial difficulties because rising costs already have outrun the prices fixed by their contracts. In other cases, he said, contractors engaged in hazardous work might have to be indemnified promptly for plant damage in order not to lose time on repairs or replacements.

Conferees Briefed

The President's letter was sent to Capitol Hill shortly after an unusual White House meeting at which the Joint Chiefs of Staff explained the problems of each of the three services to Congressional leaders in the Chief Executive's presence. In addition to Barkley and Rayburn, congressional leaders at the meeting included Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas of Illinois, and House Majority Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts. Rayburn and McCormack told reporters, after the 90-minute session, it was devoted largely to a briefing by the Joint Chiefs, Defense Secretary Marshall and the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

While Wilson studied the reorganization and streamlining of Government agencies, Price Stabilizer Michael V. DiSalle met with steel-scrap and meat industry representatives. The apparent purpose of the meetings was to seek an agreement on voluntary price controls.

Reuther Plans Wage Board Freeze Protest

By The Associated Press

Walter Reuther, head of the million-member CIO United Auto Workers, yesterday said he will fight any Federal attempt to freeze wages in the automotive industry.

Reuther said he will go before the Wage Stablization Board on Wednesday to protest any such action affecting his union's 5-year contracts. The union has agreements under which pay goes up when living costs do.

The CIO official told newsmen that a wage freeze would threaten the stability of labor relations in one third of the Nation's potential defense program.

He said the union's cost-of-living contracts have stabilized labor-management relations for a five-year period and this stability would be shaken by a wage freeze.

Reuther said General Motors alone produced one tenth of all war contracts in World War II and other companies holding UAW contracts would bring the total to one third.

The Wage Stabilization Board has scheduled closed-door hearings Wednesday to consider what wage controls must be imposed, under the law, in connection with the Government's freeze on new-car prices.

On Wednesday, the newly formed United Labor Policy Committee, consisting of top AFL, CIO and independent union leaders, will place its wage-price stabilization proposals on President Truman's desk.

The labor plan will not go into detail or make a specific mathematical recommendation about how far wages should be allowed to advance before prices are controlled, it was learned.

John L. Lewis and his United Mine Workers were invited to join in the unite dlabor committee here yesterday, but declined, the others said.

GM Sales 'Freeze' Stuns District Dealers

It was the suddenness of the G. M. action that left them with their comments down, they explained.

None of those reached by late afternoon had received telegrams from Detroit, and thus weren't sure of the provisions of the freeze.

Since they didn't know how long the order would be in effect, they adedd, they couldn't say how much it would hurt—or whether used car prices would jump—or what customer reaction would be.

And one dealer—a Pontiac agency man—hadn't even heard the rumors or second-hand accounts of the freeze that other dealers had.

"Good Lord! Holy smoke! You don't mean it!" he said. "Holy smoke! Call me later."

Another Pontiac agency representative said, in a resigned tone:

"We're perfectly happy, whatever they do. We're fighting a battle, and the rest is secondary."

"I'm just up in the air," said a third Pontiac man.

F. W. Williams, sr., who heads the loosely knit Washington Chevrolet Dealers group, charged that the Government was discriminating against auto men.

"With eggs at $1.05 a dozen, isn't it a little silly to hit the auto dealer? The Government likes to kick the auto industry around for some reason."

Williams doubted that there were many Chevrolets available for sale under the freeze.

"I don't know what it means yet," another Chevrolet dealer said. "I just don't know."

A Cadillac dealer cut the conversation short: "Call me the end of the week, and a Merry Christmas to you."

Another Cadillac dealer asked: "Don't you think it's a little too soon to know? Frankly, I don't know what's what.'

A representative for the District's largest Chevrolet agency said his company was delivering cars under the terms of the order.

"We've been getting a lot of calls," he said, "from people who were just about to buy and want to know how they'll be affected."

The GM freeze hda so overshadowed the issue of the Government-ordered rollback of prices, that Cadillac-Chevrolet-Pontiac dealers had no comment on the rollback itself.

Dealers not affected by the freeze, however, thought the rollback would stimulate buying in the long run: The factor of lower prices, inviting more buyers, becomes important, they explained, under the stringent "Regulation W" credit terms.

The only analysis of what a prolonged GM freeze might have on the cost of a used car came from a Chrysler dealer.

"It's the usual thing," he said. "Fewer new cars means used cars will be in greater demand. That will boost the going price for late model autos."

House Unit Approves Civil Defense Bill

Two-Year Survey

New Student Deferment Plan Favored

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A program of draft deferment to give the Nation's "promising" college youths a chance to complete their education was recommended unanimously yesterday by an advisory group set up by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director.

The recommendation came from six educational committees at work for two years preparing a plan that will supply the armed forces with sufficient men, yet assure a reservoir of youths for scientific research and the professions.

The joint report was presented to General Hershey at a meeting held at the State Department and attended by more than 300 representatives of schools, the professions, industry and veteran groups.

Need "Superior Score"

Under the plan students to be deferred would have to pass with a 'superior score" a general intelligence or aptitude test. Each year in school they would be required to establish "a superior academic record" to earn further deferment.

The committee suggested that a new class II-A be established for the students. Into this group would be directed youths who make a test score equivalent to a mark of 120 or better on the Army general classification examination.

After completing training a student would remain in a deferred classification for four months. This would permit him time to enter an essential field where his education would be utilized or he would become eligible for the draft.

The committee said that for each year a student was deferred, a year would be added to the age limit of "selective service liability."

For example, if a young man were deferred for three years to complete his education, a like period of three years would be added, making him eligible for the draft up to the age of 29 instead of the present limit of 26.

Committee members estimated that under this program 65,000 college youths would be deferred each year.

They refused to single out "any specific college curriculum or graduate program of instruction as essential or as warranting consideration over and above that given any other curriculum."

The advisory group also urged a program of Federal scholarships to aid needy youth to attend college.

"We would hope that in the national interest, those promising to render important service to the Nation can be accorded an opportunity to develop their talents through appropriate training at the university level," the report said.

Need No Legislation

Committee members said that their program could be put into effect "almost at once" and without additional legislation.

General Hershey, while neither approving or disapproving of the report, said he favored the general principle of deferring qualified students. He added that he thought Congress will want to consider the question and indicated that no immediate change will be made. At present college students are deferred until the end of the college year for which they are enrolled.

The recommendations were in conflict with those presented a week ago by President James B. Conant of Harvard University and Dr. Vannevar Bush, who mobilized the Nation's scientists in World War II.

The two educators were among 26 who indorsed a program of two years of universal military service for all youth at 18.

"We doubt," said the joint committee report, "that a Nation can afford to have certain young men spend two years in military service if the same Nation is likely to need them even more a few years later as high level specialists in either a military or civilian organization."

House Votes Wednesday

The House is scheduled to vote on the national measure Wednesday. A similar version is set to reach the Senate floor on Thursday or Friday.

Although there are several variations between the House an Senate civil defense bills, committee aides are predicting a compromise on the high priority legislation can be reached within perhaps an hour's time.

The proposed bill would establish a permanent civil defense agency to direct over-all plans for protecting the Nation against all forms of enemy attack—by "sabotage, or by use of bombs, shellfire, or atomic, radiological, chemical, bacteriological or biological means or other weapons or processes."

Carries No Funds

The legislation carries no specific fund authorization but Administration officials have talked in terms of a three-billion-dollar civil-defense program over a three-year period.

The new agency would be headed by a $17,500-a-year administrator who is expected to be former Florida Governor Millard E. Caldwell. He is presently acting head of a temporary civil defense agency set up a month ago by executive order.

Unlike the Administration draft, both the Senate and House bills would divide Caldwell's far-reaching powers generally in (1) those he may exercise in preparing the Nation against attack, and (2) a set of almost unlimited powers of seizure and spending which he may use upon a presidential proclamation of emergency.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People yesterday announced it would oppose Caldwell's confirmation because he was "the chief architect of a program of segregation in higher education which was designed to circumvent court decisions which gave to colored people the right to obtain higher education within the border of their home states," according to a statement by Clarence Mitchell, director of NAACP's Washington office.

Variations Cited

Variations between the Senate and House versions include these:

The House bill would bar Federal contributions to self-liquidating municipal projects such as underground parking garages which might be used for bomb shelters. This proviso was voted to guard against the Federal Government attempting to solve long-range city traffic problems in the name of civil defense.

The House bill authorizes funds for stockpiling equipment, but makes no provisions for paying local defense workers.

Ship Transfer Curb Espoused by Vinson

By the United Press

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Armed Services Committee announced yesterday he will introduce a bill to block transfer of United States warships to Latin American countries unless Congress approves such transfers.

The Government is considering the availability of vessels for other American countries with long coastlines and substantial navies, such as Chile, Argentina Peru, Brazil and Colombia. Some preliminary discussions already have been held.

Chilean President Gabriel Videla indicated several weeks ago his country was interested in buying two cruisers. No vessels other than light cruisers would be transferred, under present plans.

Vinson said existing laws ban such transfers but the Defense Department believes the military foreign aid bill supersedes earlier laws.

Under the aid bill, the United States can sell surplus military equipment to countries joined with it in defense pacts such as the Rio de Janeiro treaty. Recipient countries would have to pay 10 percent of the original cost of the vessels, plus rehabilitation costs.

Vinson said he did not know details of the proposed transfers but "it is being looked into." He said he will introduce a bill in January which would ban the sale or transfer of any combat ship "without prior consent of Congress."

Early Meeting Is Sought Against Red Aggression

By The Associated Press

The United States plans to press promptly for a new meeting of the 21 American Republics to tighten hemisphere defenses against threats of Communist aggression.

Officials said yesterday it is hoped a meeting of Foreign Ministers can be held here by mid-February. President Truman was represented as desiring a conference at this time to show that, although United States interests may appear to be elsewhere, "we have our own hemisphere relations very much to the fore in our thinking."

Secretary of State Acheson announced this Government wants the meeting. United States Delegate Paul C. Daniels is expected to submit a formal proposal Wednesday to the Council of the Organization of American States. The other American Governments will be polled on the date that would be most convenient. A two-thirds vote is binding.

GWU Glee Club To Entertain Alaska Troops

Twenty-six members of the George Washington University Glee Club will leave Washington at 9 a. m. Friday for an 11-day concert tour of military installations in Alaska and the Aleutian Islands.

The group will be accompanied by Dr. Robert Howe Harmon, who is director, and also associate university physician, and Mrs. Harmon, assistant director.

At 8:30 p. m. tonight and Wednesday, the Glee Club, with the Air Force Glee Club and concert orchestra, will present Handel's "Messiah" in Lisner Auditorium. Before Wednesday night's performance, the Glee Club will sing carols at 7 p. m. in the university's hospital.

Chinese Group in D. C. Backs U. S. in Fight on Communists

A vote of support for the United States in its fight against communism came from a Washington Chinese group yesterday.

The Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association pledged its "unqualified support and cooperation" in the Government's battle against "the menace of communism."

The Rev. C. C. Hung, president of the group and pastor of the Chinese Community Church, said the association consisted of 17 civic, business, religious and family groups representing the 2000 members of the Chinese community in Washington.

In the statement addressed to the American people and sent to President Truman, the association declared it felt a responsibility "in this world crisis to respond with everything at our command to defend the democratic principles that have been uprooted in China.

"We stand wholeheartedly behind the United States Government and all the free peoples of the world as they engage the menace of communism," the message asserted.

". . . The Communists who have by the force of arms seized control of great areas of China are undertaking a nefarious campaign to mislead the Chinese people into believing that their source of hope is Russia.

"We in the United States who have had the good fortune to experience life under a true democracy can vouch for the sincerity of the United States in its long-standing friendship with and generosity to the Chinese people . . ."

Defense Plan Set Up By North Virginians

A detailed plan for the civil defense organization of Northern Virginia has been completed and is ready to "hook on" to the civil defense bill now before Congress.

George G. Strott, executive assistant to Gen. Jacob L. Devers, director of the Northern Virginia Civil Defense region, announced the plan yesterday. He released an organization chart breaking down the area's civil defense into nine categories and assigns men to organize and direct the work of each.

Strott said the plans were completed at a special staff meeting held Sunday at Fairfax County civil defense headquarters in the county police substation at Groveton.

Strott also said that Fairfax County, one of four areas in the Northern Virginia region, has completed its own county civil defense organization.

The Northern Virginia region, along with the nearby portions of Maryland, is part of the Washington metropolitan area in defense planning.

Strott pointed out that all the men designed to serve in the Northern Virginia civil defense organization are residents of that area, and will serve in the counties where they reside.

Some of these men also have been appointed to a special staff, to serve as regional representatives on a Washington Metropolitan Area Civil Defense Subcommittee. These men, and their assignments, are:

Alfred A. Arborgast, contractor, in charge of resources; Guy N. Church, deputy area defense director, communications; Dr. Ralph G. Beachley, Arlington health officer, medical; Dr. C. K. Himmelsbach, scientist, radiological; Gordon O. Stone, American Red Cross official, welfare; James A. Darling, chief engineer with the President's committee on civil defense engineering; Edward J. McDermott, retired Virginia State police captain, police; Bernard J. Padgett, chief of the Alexandria Fire Department, fire; Basil A. DeLashmutt, engineer and former Arlington County Board member, warden service.

Advisory Council Named

Working under General Devers will be an advisory council, made up of State Senator Andrew W. Clarke, legal; R. DerTatevasion, public relations, and directors and coordinators of the four areas in the region. These area heads are:

Alexandria, P. A. Backus, director; W. M. Barbour, coordinator; Falls Church, Albert Orme, director, Jospeh W. Seay, coordinator; Arlington County, A. T. Lundberg, director; Fairfax County, Guy N. Church, director, George G. Strott, coordinator.

Within each county the nine defense categories will be manned by county residents who are specialists in each field.

In Fairfax County this organization, now completed, will be as follows:

Rufus G. Coldwell, attorney, in charge of resources, including personnel-census classification, equipment-inventory and control, procurement and supply and planning and training.

Heads Communications

Frank C. Mallison, electrical engineer, in charge of communications, including telephone and telegraph, radio and television, message and other forms of communication.

Dr. Fred C. Heath, Fairfax County health officer, in charge of medical and health, including casualty treatment, evacuation, hospitalization, public health and rescue (in buildings only).

Herbert Seoville, jr., physicist, in charge of radiological and safety, including monitoring, mapping, decontamination and radiological laboratory.

Elliott Maxwell, attorney, in charge of welfare, including relief and rehabilitation, food, shelter and clothing and legal aid to lost persons.

G. Hubard Massey, sanitary engineer, in charge of engineering, including power and fuel, water and sewer, buildings and shelter, transportation, demolition, and rescue in destroyed buildings only.

To Handle Police

Maj. Carl R. McIntosh, Fairfax police chief, in charge of police, including intelligence, screening, enforcement, traffic and sabotage.

John H. Carper, Fairfax fire chief, in charge of fire, including fire fighting, fire prevention and rescue in buildings only.

Col. Waldron E. Leonard, veterans service center official, in charge of warden service, including census, for identification of everyone in each community, watch control and training.

In addition, Fairfax County has these men as consultants:

Robert B. Walker, schools; David Lawrence, international affairs; Judge Paul E. Brown, judicial; G. Wallace Carper, local governments; James Elgin, business; Earl Godwin, press; the Rev. Raymond W. Davis, clergy; Huso Maters, labor; Edward T. Gibbons has the county public relations role.

Strott said that now that organization of the leaders of the county's defense plan has been completed, hope is to have the plan well into operation by February 1.

Red Germans Give Warning On Brussels

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Communist East German government tonight warned West Germany either to meet with it at the conference table or share with the Western Allies "the terrible guilt of changing West Germany into an instrument of American war."

Press Chief Albert Norden termed the Brussels conference of Atlantic Pact nations a meeting "at which the sale of German people for American war shall be sealed."

He said President Truman's proclamation of a national emergency was to promote armament and war.

Recently East German Prime Minister Otto Grotewohl wrote West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer proposing that the two governments meet to discuss German unity. The note received a cold reception at Bonn but was not rejected officially.

Norden said Bonn leaders could: "Either begin all-German discussions and bring the ministers of both governments to the conference table, or burden themselves with the terrible cogullt in changing Western Germany into an instrument of American war."

R. B. Adams May Get State Dept. Office

A West Virginia congressional delegation said President Truman disclosed yesterday he is considering appointing Russell B. Adams, a member of the Civil Aeronautics Board, as assistant Secretary of State.

Senator Kilgore (D., W. Va.) said the group learned this when it called at the White House to urge Adams' reappointment to the CAB post he now holds. His present term expires shortly.

Kilgore said Mr. Truman told the delegation the question is whether he will reappoint Adams to the CAB or name him to a new post of Assistant Secretary of State for Air.

SEOUL, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The release of three American, three British and three South Korean prisoners of war by the North Koreans was announced tonight by the United States Eighth Army.

The men walked back to the Allied line along the South Korean border Sunday. They had been in North Korean hands for three weeks. They said they were treated well, and saw no Chinese troops.

The Americans were Corpl. Earl E. Roush, Corpl. Albert Billingsley, and Pfc. Vincent Fasci. Their addresses were not available immediately. They were captured late last month in northeast Korea, where they were serving with the United States Third Division.

This was the first time the North Koreans had released any Allied prisoners. Some United States officers believed it was a propaganda maneuver. They recalled its similarity to the Chinese release of prisoners just before the offensive which opened last month.

The Britons were captured at Sibyon, southeast of Pyongyang, on November 30 after a night battle with an organized guerilla force. They were reported suffering from minor effects of exposure, but otherwise in good shape.

The prisoners were released near Yonchon, just north of the border above Seoul.

DISPERSE—From Pa. 1

Unity Urged On Dispersal

ing into big towns, the kind that make good bomb targets.

A by-product of such living would be tremendous savings in such war-critical materials as tires, gasoline and autos, which would be used up if commuting to the dispersed cities was necessary. And labor turnover caused by housing problems would be reduced, he said.

Should Start Early

He said the planning for communities should start early—as early as the planning for the office units. He said the Federal Government should revise its plans for purchase of 200 to 300 acres for each town upward to 2000 to 4000 acres to provide space for the living features.

Stein's testimony posed a curious situation. He has recently been employed as an expert adviser for General Services Administration in planning for the dispersal program but apparently his views yesterday did not coincide with those of his new employers.

Public Buildings Commissioner W. E. Reynolds opposed any amendments to the pending dispersal bill, other than to consult with State and local agencies before finally selecting sites. He said the matter of zoning, land control and "green" belts was primarily the responsibility of State and local ogvernments.

Housing, Not Schools

He said the Housing and Home Finance Agency would be interested in housing near the new towns, but probably not schools and stores.

Although he felt the belt insulation was desirable, as well as overall planning for communities near the transferred agencies, he made it plain he felt such matters did not belong in the 190-million-dollar dispersal bill.

Earlier, spokesmen for two planning groups urged an amendment to the bill assuring that the Federal Government would confer with State and local authorities before finally selecting a site to safeguard against upsetting existing plans for development of the areas.

The pleas were made by I. Alvin Pasarew, director of the Maryland State Planning Commission, and Frederick Gutheim, chairman of the Washington Regional Planning Council and a member of the Upper Montgomery County Planning Commission.

Gutheim also recommended that the law authorize the Housing and Home Finance Administrator to acquire land by purchase or condemnation for development of necessary housing and community facilities in the towns.

Later, Frank Mulkern, 3133 Connecticut ave., speaking for the Izaak Walton League of America, urged that consideration be given to planning of water supply and sewage disposal in the new towns so that progress made in cleaning up the Potomac River is not wasted.

The subcommittee, headed by Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.), will hold an executive session later this week to discuss a report on the bill. On the House side, a spokesman for the Public Works Committee has already stated no action will be taken on the bill until the new session of Congress next month.

'Mighty Mo' Shells Reds

lery also banged away all night.

Marine fliers from the carriers Princeton, Bataan and Philippine Sea all reported hitting Red troops around the Changjin Reservoir, 50 miles northwest of the beachhead. Fliers from the Philippine Sea said they destroyed a small group of Red cavalry and 15 artillery pieces.

One pilot reported he scored a direct bomb hit on a railroad station where Red troops took shelter.

A United States Tenth Corps spokesman identified a "very aggressive" North Korean regiment as spearheading the Red attempt to drive the last remaining United Nations forces in northeast Korea into the sea. Previously only Chinese troops have opposed United Nations forces along the perimeter.

Right Flank Is Danger Spot

An estimated 100,000 Chinese are taking part in the drive, with at least one fourth of this force committed on the Hungnam plain.

The Tenth Corps spokesman said "the right flank is the only place were the danger flag is flying right now."

United States Third Division infantrymen held firm there in their frozen foxholes.

The spokesman confirmed that so far the Chinese had been unable to burst through the line curtained by naval gunfire and strafing planes.

The Missouri now was hurling salvoes of shells at Chinese Reds holding northern ridge positions overlooking the flatlands approaching Hungnam.

Her 16-inch guns have a range of well over 20 miles.

Once before in a critical period of the Korean war, the "Mighty Mo" broke up a Korean Red assault on the southeast port of Pohang. That was last September when she dropped 300 tons of exploding steel on the Reds in a four-hour bombardment.

Bringing up the mightiest warship afloat was the equivalent of adding eight destroyers and nine railway guns to the firepower already shielding Hungnam.

Third Division doughboys on the front lines had intermittent firefights with the Reds most of the day, Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton reported.

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert, also at Hungnam, said United States Seventh Division lines on the left flank of the perimeter had a day of quiet Monday.

On the left flank and to the west toward burning Hamhung the Reds were pinned down by the Navy bombardment.

However, a Tenth Corps spokesman said a Chinese force was moving west of Hamhung toward Yonpo Airfield, some 3½ air miles south of Hungnam. Another force of Reds moved south toward Hamhung in a "V" formation.

There was no information at Hungnam as to the size or exact position of either Red Force. The status of the field was regarded a security matter.

Thus far the big Red force has been unable to bring artillery into play. Air reconnaissance reported Monday night that only one Red field piece had been sighted west of Hamhung. Carrier pilots swooping over the same area also reported numerous Red supply and troop movements.

The man in charge of Allied operations in northeastern Korea was well satisfied.

"Things are going just the way we planned them on the Hungnam beachhead," said Maj. Gen. Edward A. Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps.

Hungnam itself, a busy manufacturing center before the war and site of a sprawling fertilizer plant, was a tangle of wreckage, Correspondent Swinton said. Heavily bombed by Superforts before its liberation by South Korean troops last October, the city is a mass of twisted girders and tottering, roofless walls.

Swinton reported that soot from burning buildings begrimed the snow and constantly filled the air. "The sound and sight of war . . . are always present," he said.

Bill to Reestablish War Damage Corp. Passed by House

The House unanimously approved a bill yesterday to reestablish the War Damage Corporation to insure property against damage from enemy attack. The measure now goes to the Senate.

The agency would be capitalied at one billion dollars by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The new war insurance plan is similar to the one in effect during World War II.

AF Probing 'Leak' Of Sabre Jet News

AT AN ADVANCED U. S. AIR BASE, Korea (Tuesday) Dec. 19 (NYHT).—Lieut. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer, Fifth Air Force commander, ordered today a full investigation of the premature publication of information that a group of American Sabre fighter planes is in action in Korea.

Stratemeyer said lives of American pilots were endangered by the leak. The Sabre has never before been used in combat.

Air Force officers called the leak "one of the gravest security violations of the war."

The Sabre is the world's fastest combat aircraft, so far as is known, and holds the official world speed record of 670 miles an hour.

The presence of the Sabre had been one of the most closely guarded secrets of the Korean war.

When it became known Sunday that Lieut. Col. Bruce H. Hinton, of the Fourth Fighter group, which was flying Sabres, had scored the first "kill" of a Russian-built jet MIG-15 by a Sabre, correspondents inquired in a body to ask whether they could send dispatches about this event. Stratemeyer's headquarters told the correspondents specifically that they were not being released from their pledge.

graphers, rigidly screened, were permitted through lines of black-helmeted police and gendarmes to get a glimpse of the green, 60-foot long table where the ministers and aides sat with piles of secret documents. The reporters quickly were ushered out when the ministers began their business meeting.

The ministers sat for nearly four hours. An official described it as "an intent work session," with no speeches, no disagreements. The ministers went through the two plans, already approved by the defense ministers, paragraph by paragraph. Consecutive translations were heard.

At the end this communique was issued:

"The Council and the Defense Committee of the North Atlantic Pact met and made substantial progress on their agenda which they expect to complete tomorrow. A complete communique will be issued at the end of tomorrow's session."

On Tuesday, several of the ministers, including Acheson, are expected to make speeches on the world situation. In the afternoon, and probably again in the evening, there will be a get-together of the Big Three—Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman.

Must Convince Germans

They will also have to decide on how to get the Germans to swallow their part in the rearmament program. That program provides for the Germans to be organized in combat teams of 5000 to 6000 men each and scattered through the Western defense line. They would have no general staff of their own and they would be outnumbered in each division at least two to one. The West German government already has indicated it would turn this down.

right, and as we closed in on them we started a harder turn to the right and turned inside of them. We got right in behind them.

"It was then that they let go their wing tanks and shoved on the coal. We dropped our tanks too, and we poured on the coal too. We eased up on them, although they were going like hell. I picked out a target plane, and I closed in gradually on him. When I was in range I let go with a burst.

"I could see the tracer bullets hitting him. They damaged him. I could tell, because he wiggled a bit in the air. I continued firing. The guy started burning and smoking very badly. The smoke decreased and a bunch of flame came out of him and he slowed down.

"He appeared to go out of control. By that time I was within 500 or 800 feet of him. As he went down I had my air brakes on, but he was going too slow for me to follow. The last time I saw him he was out of control and on his way down."

Confirmed By Colleague

Another member of the flight, Lieut. Paul W Bruce, jr., of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., was the last to see the falling MIG.

"The fellow was at about 3000 feet and was spinning down, definitely out of control," said Bryce "I am sure he never was able to pull out of that spin."

The F-86s flew their first mission on the day they reached this base. They encountered no enemy. The next day, December 16, a snowstorm kept them on the ground. On the morning of December 17 they escorted B-29 bombers to the Kanggye area, but met no enemy fighters and only light flak.

It was during the afternoon that they went out "to wait and look for Migs," as one pilot put it.

Col. John C. Meyer of Forest Hills, N. Y., is leader of the fighter group.

Fret at Restriction

He said proudly:

"It's just the finest airplane I ever saw or every flew. It's just everything good wrapped up in one fast package. It's even nice to taxi, and nice and warm and comfortable to sit in. It has all the little things as well as all the big ones."

Meyer, a leading ace who bagged 37 German planes in the air or on the ground during World War II, fretted about restrictions preventing American planes in Korea from pursuing Communist fighters across the Yalu into Manchuria. He drew a line in the sand with the toe of his boot, and said:

"It's as though I told you 'I can punch you in the nose, but you can't reach across that line to hit me back.'"

Legal Wire Tapping Proposed For U. S. Agents When Needed

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Representative Kenneth B. Keating (R., N. Y.) yesterday called for legalizing use of wire taps as a means of tracking down spies, traitors, and saboteurs.

Keating, a member of the House Judiciary Committee, introduced a bill to permit Federal Bureau of Investigation and military intelligence agents to obtain Federal Court orders for wire tapping when they have "probable cause" to believe national security is involved.

Keating told the House the bill was needed "as a practical matter." Unless Federal and military investigators are given the legal right to tap wires, Keating said, the "absurd and dangerous" rule would be that spies can use telephones but Government agents could not listen in.

Civil Rights Guarded

At the same time, said Keating, "the civil rights of our citizens must be guarded at all times." He suggested the requirement for a Federal judge's order for each wiretap would provide the necessary protection.

Keating said the Government dilemma in wire tapping was highlighted when a Federal Circuit Court overruled Judith Coplon's New York conviction for plotting to spy on this country for Russia. In the appeals decision, the court suggested the advisability of modifying the doctrine that now bars use of wire-tap evidence in prosecutions.

Warrant Issue Cited

Another part of the Circuit Court's decision in the Coplon case was echoed at the Capitol development yesterday when a House Judiciary Subcommittee recommended a bill that would make it unnecessary to prove that a defendant was trying to escape an arrest without a warrant.

Failure of the Government to prove that Miss Coplon was trying to flee when FBI agents arrested her without a warrant was a major element in the decision by the Appeals Court setting aside her conviction.

Keating said the bill is slated for attention by the full House Judiciary Committee today.

Meanwhile, Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.) said he had received no reply from Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) to the letter sent last week by the special District of Columbia Wire Tapping Investigating Subcommittee inviting Brewster to testify. Pepper heads the subcommittee.

Bird Dog Serves As Fireman But Home Burns Down

BRAINERD, Minn., Dec. 18 (AP). Tippy, a well-educated Chesapeake, knows when to shift his retrieving know-how into reverse.

The home of Howard Edwards, with whom Tippy lives, 6 miles east of Brainerd, caught fire Sunday. The blaze broke out in a partition through which a stove pipe passed.

Edwards started ripping off boards from the wall to get at the fire. Tippy picked up the flaming boards and dashed outside in the snow with them. He repeated the act many times.

The flames gained such headway, however, that Edwards and his dog had to leave. The home was destroyed.

House Votes Free Service Insurance

By the United Press

The House unanimously passed a bill yesterday to give all servicemen $10,000 worth of free Government insurance as a substitute for the present optional national service life insurance program.

Under the measure, which now goes to the Senate, the new insurance program would be retroactive to June 27 to protect veterans of the bloody fighting in Korea.

The Defense Department's most recent casualty list, issued last Thursday, included 5870 confirmed American dead—men whose next of kin have been officially notified. It included few of the victims of the fighting since the Chinese Communists launched their current assault.

Would Be Automatic

The free insurance would be automatic. Under the present NSLI program, servicemen have the option of buying Government policies at rates less than those charged by private insurance firms. But many GIs never take the policies.

Under the free program, the GI's beneficiary would get 120 equal monthly payments of about $92 each. There is no provision for the optional payment method in effect under the NSLI program.

Men in uniform who now hold NSLI policies could keep them. They also could surrender them as long as they stayed in service—taking advantage of the free program—and then reinstate their NSLI policies when they are discharged. They would not be eligible for refunds on premiums paid since June 27.

Chairman John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), of the House Veterans Committee, predicted the Senate will approve th measure during the curent lame-duck session. Rankin sponsored the legislation.

The House also approved a bill that would give disabled veterans of the Korean fighting the same vocational training benefits enjoyed by GIs during World War II. The measure, already approved by the Senate, now goes to President Truman for signature.

Another bill passed by the House and sent to the Senate would authorize a study of the mental and physical results of malnutrition and imprisonment suffered by American servicemen during World War II.

Data for Claim Filing

The results would be used to weigh any later claims by prisoners of war.

Premiums for national service life insurance policies now are deducted from the serviceman's pay. More than 20,000,000 policies have been sold since the beginning of World War II and thousands were converted by GIs upon their discharge.

The General Accounting Office reported, however, that it cost more to administer the program and pay special benefits for "extra hazard" deaths than it would cost to grant the free insurance.

Opponents of the free plan complained it gives the serviceman no protection when he returns to private life although it does protect him for 90 days until he is launched into civilian life.

The only exception to this would be men so badly wounded in service that they could not obtain commercial insurance after their discharge. They would be permitted to buy special Government insurance.

M'Arthur Sets Up Advisory Unit on Korea War News

TOKYO, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Establishment of a press advisory division to assist correspondents on news matters pertaining to the Korean war was announced today by the Public Information section of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

The announcement was made by Public Information Officer Col. M. P. Echols, who said the division "may suggest rewrites or deletions in press copy but will not censor it." The press, he added "will remain on the voluntary censorship basis."

The new section will be headed by Col. E. C. Burkhard, New Britain, Pa. It will furnish press information on the military situation in Korea not involving security and advise correspondents on security phases of field dispatches, the announcement said.

The four-man division will also screen photographs for security purposes at the request of agencies concerned.

Remington Trial Delayed Briefly

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—The trial of William W. Remington, former Commerce Department economist accused of perjury in denying he ever was a Communist, was postponed today until Wednesday.

The case was assigned to Federal Judge Gregory F. Noonan.

Forty-six members of a jury panel of 100 were excused, after they said they would not be able to spend as much as a month at the trial. The others were told to report back Wednesday.

Remington, 33, who resigned his $10,000-a-year Commerce Department job after he was indicted last June by a Federal grand jury, could get up to five years in prison and a $2000 fine, if convicted.

Lab Worker Pleads Contempt Innocence

Irving David Fox, former employe of the radiation laboratory at the University of California, pleaded innocent yesterday to contempt charges stemming from his refusal to answer questions by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Federal Judge Edward Tamm set Fox's trial for January 23. He was freed on $1500 bond.

A Federal grand jury indicted Fox on 16 counts December 4 for refusing to answer questions during the committee's investigation of the alleged "Scientist X" atomic espionage case at the radiation center during World War II.

The grand jury also indicted Giovanni Rossi Lamanitz, another former employe at the center, and Steve Nelson, western Pennsylvania Communist leader. They were arraigned previously and are free on bail.

House investigators charged that someone at the radiation center slipped atomic secrets to Nelson, then assigned to the West Coast as a Communist organizer. Nelson allegedly passed them on to Russian officials.

Ilse Feigns Insanity, Doctor Says

AUGSBURG, Dec. 18 (AP).—A German physician testified today that Ilse Koch is imitating an insane person but is unable to attend her trial in a German court here.

Dr. Rudolf Engler and another physician examined Mrs. Koch in Aichach Prison, where she is recovering from a recent hysterical collapse.

Dr. Engler said she was acting normally when he spoke to her, but suddenly talked confusedly when he mentioned her trial.

Dr. Albert Sighart said she was shamming, but owing to her present nervous state—brought about by herself—she was still unable to follow the proceedings.

Mrs. Koch, wife of the former Buchenwald concentration camp commander, is being tried for alleged crimes against German and Austrian nationals. She is accused of inciting 46 murders.

A parade of witnesses continued in her absence. Robert Sperl, a former Buchenwald inmate, testified that Mrs. Koch once ordered an SS man to beat and kick a group of Jewish prisoners because they had touched her two children.

Sperl said the Jews helped the children to get up after they fell from a sled. "How can a Jew touch my children," Sperl quoted Mrs. Koch as saying to the SS man, who immediately began to kick and beat the Jews.

Former inmate Ludwig Bendenaus testified he had seen Mrs. Koch lashing out the eye of a Polish prisoner with her horsewhip.

U. N. Committee Sending Plea to Peiping

that membership in the U. N. for Red China, withdrawal of all foreign troops—U. N. forces—from Korea, and moving the U. S. Seventh Fleet away from Formosa should be the basis of negotiation for a Korean cease-fire.

Up to a late hour today, he had not announced whether his group had changed its mind about going back to Peiping Tuesday.

The indefinite postponement of the Formosa discussion may change their minds about leaving now, one top delegate said. But Malik told the committee that the Red Chinese can't stay here indefinitely. He said the committee was "impolite" to Wu.

One Nationalist Chinese source predicted the Peiping regime would invite the negotiators to travel to Peiping—and then tell them the same thing that Wu told the reporters.

The message sent by the negotiators to Chou En-lai, Peiping Foreign Minister, told him "the purpose of this cease-fire in Korea will be to prevent the conflict from spreading to other areas, to put an end to the fighting in Korea, and to provide an opportunity for considering what further steps should be taker for a peaceful settlement of existing issues."

One of the principal issues, Red China's demands for the Chinese seat in the United Nations, was taken up briefly last week by a committee of seven to study that demand, under Rau's chairmanship. It agreed not to discuss it until the cease-fire issue is decided.

Rau also has introduced a resolution which would set up a seven-nation committee, including Russia, the United States and Red China, to negotiate on all Far Eastern disputes. But Rau has given all his efforts to pushing the cease-fire measure and to informal meetings with Wu. He has not pressed his second proposal.

The situation gave the West an appearance of having a diplomatic advantage for the first time in the Korean dispute. It amounted to telling Russia and China there must be an answer on the cease-fire or none of their proposals will even be considered.

The committee voted 50 to 5 (Soviet bloc) with four abstentions to choke off any committee action until the cease-fire proposal is negotiated.

The World's Greatest Christmas Stories

Babicka

This is another of a two-week series of selections from "The World's Greatest Christmas Stories," a new anthology edited by Eric Posselt, just published by Prentice-Hall.

Today's story is by Bozena Nemcova (1820-1862), "grand old lady of Czech literature." She wrote many folk tales and idyllic narratives of country life in the area which is now Czechoslovakia. The translation is by Vaclav Polak.

By Bozena Nemcova

WHEN the Christmas holidays were drawing near, the conversation was invariably interspersed with talks about the baking of Christmas rolls, discussions about the most desirable fineness of the flour and how much butter each intended to use.

The girls also talked about the traditional "melting of lead"—usually tinfoil—and the children of the good Christ-loaves, and about how these children sailed lighted candles in nut shells. The very little ones babbled of the Christ Child and the presents He would bring them.

It was the custom at the mill, the gamekeeper's lodge and the old bleachery that whoever came on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day would get all he wanted to eat and drink. In fact, if no one would show up, Babicka, the grandmother, would probably have gone to the crossroads to look for someone.

Her joy can be imagined when, unexpectedly, her son Kaspar with her nephew from Olesnice arrived the day before Christmas! For an entire half-day she wept with joy, and every few minutes she left her baking and ran back into the living room to look at them, and to ask her nephew how this one and that one were doing in her old home town.

"Your grandfather looked exactly like your uncle here, except he was a great deal taller," she'd say time after time.

The children examined their uncle and the new cousin from all angles and were obviously much pleased with them, especially since they replied pleasantly to their endless questions.

Every year the children were firmly resolved to fast the day before Christmas so that, in the evening, they might see the promised golden pigs running about the room; but they never succeeded in keeping the fast all day long. Their intentions were good enough, but their flesh invariably proved too weak.

ON Christmas Eve everybody received a goodly share of dainties; and even the poultry and the cattle were not forgotten when the Christmas loaves were cut. After supper the grandmother took a part of the contents from each dish and threw half of what she took into the brook in order that the water would remain pure, while she buried the rest under a tree in the orchard in order that the soil might prove fertile. She brushed the crumbs carefully off the table and threw them into the fire, so that no witch could do them any damage.

After all work was done, Betty took a branch of sweet elder outdoors and, shaking it, recited:

"Sweet elder branch, I shake thee,
Tell me, ye dogs who wake me,
Where my intended might be!"

Then she listened to ascertain the direction in which the dogs were barking—for that's where her future husband was at that very minute!

In the living room the girls were melting a mixture of lead—or tinfoil—and wax, throwing the molten mass into cold water to divine the future from the bizarre shapes it assumed. The children were sailing lighted candles in nutshell boats representing the ships of life. John secretly gave the pan of water a little push, and the shells merrily sailed from the edge to the center of the water. Then he cried joyfully:

"Look, I shall travel far, far into the world!"

"My dear boy," his mother said softly while peeling an apple for him, "once you get out into the stream of life, and the waves threaten to dash your boat on the rocks, you'll think longingly of the quiet haven from which you sailed."

And she cut the apple crosswise through its widest part, "for luck." The seeds made a star, three of its rays clear and sound, but two were imperfect and worm-eaten. Laying the apple aside with a sigh, she cut Barunka's, and again the star was imperfect. She thought, "Neither one of them will ever be perfectly happy!" Then she cut Willy's and Adelka's; and in those the stars were clear and sound, but had only four rays.

"These two probably will be happier," she mused. Adelka interrupted her by complaining that her nutshell boat wasn't going very far away from the shore, and that her candle was almost burned down.

"Mine isn't going very far, either!" said Willy.

At that moment someone pushed against the pan, the water was all waves, and the boats in the center sank.

"See, see, you'll die before we do!" Adelka and Willy cried in unison.

"That doesn't matter a bit, we're going to travel far anyway!" Barunka replied, and John agreed with her. But the mother stared sadly at the extinguished candles, and a presentiment took possession of her soul that, perhaps, this innocent, childish play might, after all, foreshadow the future.

"WILL the Child Jesus bring us something?" the children asked their "granny" in a whisper, after the table had been cleared.

"Now, I don't know," she answered: "you will know when He rings the bell."

So the smallest of the children took up their post at the window, hoping that, when Jesus went by, they'd see Him.

"Don't you know that Jesus can neither be seen nor heard?" Granny asked them. "He is in His heaven on a shining throne and sends His gifts to good children by angels who bring them down on golden clouds. All you'll hear is the bell."

Listening piously to what Babicka said, the children still kept staring out of the window. Just then a gleaming light became momentarily visible outside, and the tinkle of a bell was heard. They clasped their hands, while Adelka whispered: "Grandma, that was Child Jesus, wasn't it?"

Granny nodded. Then the door opened and the mother came in, telling the children that Child Jesus had left gifts for them in their grandmother's room.

When they saw a beautiful lighted tree, their joy knew no bounds. Babicka herself was not familiar with this custom since it was not a common one among the villagers, but she was much pleased with it, and long before Christmas, had seen to it that a proper tree was provided, and she herself had helped her daughter trim it.

"In Neisse and Kladrau they had had trees, too, do you remember Kaspar?" Babicka asked her son. "You were quite a boy when you left." She sat down beside him, leaving the children to enjoy their Christmas tree and the presents.

"Of course I remember, maminka," Kaspar replied. "It is a good custom, and you did well, Theresa, to introduce it here. The memory of Christmas will be dear to the children forever, once they find themselves adrift in the world. Away from home, one always loves to remember this day! Certainly I found this to be true.

"MY master wasn't too strict, and I managed to have a good time during my apprentice years; and yet, I always thought, 'Oh, if I could only be home with my mother tonight, and eat pudding with honey, and buns with poppyseed sauce, and peas with cabbage!' I would gladly have exchanged all the good things I had for that homely fare!"

"Yes, our Christmas food!" granny smiled. "But didn't you forget the mixed dried fruit?"

"And so I did," he replied, nodding. "But, you know, I never did care for them. Though I thought of something else just now—in Dobrau they call it 'music.'"

"Oh, I know what you mean! The shepherds' Christmas carol! We sing that here, too, you'll hear it before long," his mother said, and she had hardly finished when the shepherd's horn was heard near the window. First the melody of the carol was played upon the horn, and then the shepherds sang:

"Arise, ye shepherds, arise!
"Glad tidings to you we bring:
"Today a Savior was born to us
"In a manger in Bethlehem."

"You're quite right, Kaspar," Babicka remarked. "If I didn't hear this song it wouldn't seem like Christmas to me." Then she went outdoors and loaded down the singers with dainties.

On St. Stephen's Day the boys went out to sing carols at the mill and at the gamekeeper's. Indeed, if they hadn't shown up, the miller would have thought the ceiling must have dropped upon them, and she herself would have come around to the old bleachery to see what had happened. And afterwards other boys came to sing in return.

Now the Christmas holidays were over; and the children already began to talk of other holy days, such as that of the Wise Men from the East. And then the schoolmaster dropped in, sang a song of Christ's birth, and wrote the names of the three Wise Men on the door: Gaspar, Melchior, Balthasar.

Senate Shelves GOP Demand For Truman-Attlee Talk Data

traces on many an Administration foreign and domestic move, opened the debate with a dramatic appeal for unity.

McKellar did not mention Republicans by name but appealed to both parties to "stay together . . . and work only for our common country . . . hold our criticisms and dissensions until a more propitious day."

In what he called the Nation's "supreme moment and greatest test" he urged the critics to "get together behind our President and behind our Government."

"Our President, Mr. Truman, is our President and will be until January 1953," said McKellar. "In everything we do or say to discredit him, we are helping the Russians. If we are forced into a war, he will be our Commander-in-Chief . . .

"Don't let it be said of us that it was during our service that the United States lost her first great conflict. Let us forget politics, forget differences, forget everything except that our Government and our people are in danger."

McKellar said that whatever Truman's critics may say of him the men he once served with in the Senate "know that he is honest, know that he is able, and know that he is courageous, and that he has the power to appoint executive officers by and with the consent of the Senate."

Republicans did not answer McKellar but a few of them took the floor in rebuttal of Fulbright's speech. Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) said Republicans acted with "considerable moderation" in waiting a month after the election before pressing their demands for the ouster of Acheson.

Brewster disclosed that he had participated in some "negotiations" with Democrats in hopes of obtaining Acheson's resignation without formal party demands. He said silence on Acheson was impossible "in view of the feeling of the country" and said he looked like a man "who had lost completely his grasp, his courage and his leadership."

Fulbright did not dispute Brewster's claim that many Democrats wanted Acheson replaced but said this did not excuse the character attacks which were in fact attacks on the President. He said there was no question of Acheson's patriotism.

Fulbright told Republicans that if they wanted to change the Nation's foreign policy the only way to do it was by removing the President at the polls or by impeachment, since Acheson is merely his representative. Later, in answer to question by Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) Fulbright stressed that he certainly was not advocating impeachment.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) accused Acheson and the State Department of "leaving the door open to communism in the Far East" while closing it in Europe. Knowland said Acheson's policies "paralleled" those of Chamberlain before World War II. He said Chamberlain "had to give way to Churchill" to give Britain the unity needed.

Fulbright retorted that the British parliamentary system is quite different from our own and the Secretary of State does not play the same role as the British Prime Minister.

Here the President is responsible for foreign policy and "Mr. Acheson is not in the position of the British Prime Minister," he said.

Fulbright added that he wasn't objecting to criticism of our foreign policy in any event but the "wisdom" of the personalized Republican attack on Acheson.

Scottsboro Case Figure Quizzed in Barroom Slaying

DETROIT, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Haywood Patterson, 37, last of nine defendants to be freed in Alabama's Scottsboro case, was arrested today for questioning in a barroom knife slaying here Saturday night.

Patterson surrendered to his attorney, who turned him over to police. Officers said they would question the former convict about the fatal stabbing of William Mitchell, 27.

Patterson was sentenced in 1931 along with eight other Negro youths for an alleged assault on a white woman in Alabama. He escaped from a Montgomery, Ala., prison farm July 17, 1948, and won freedom only five months ago when Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams refused to return him to Alabama.

Truman Dines At Statler With Fellow-Masons

President Truman attended a small dinner last night at which John R. Steelman, presidential adviser, was initiated into a Masonic order.

The Chief Executive a 32nd Degree Mason, dined upstairs in the Statler Hotel with a dozen fellow Masons, while the Almas Lodge initiation ceremony was carried out below. An "Arab" band played as the initiates were led into the room, hanging to a rope.

Mr. Truman did not sport a fez, though most of his tablemates did. Joe Short, White House press secretary, said the dinner was a "very small, private affair." The guests included Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, and the President's miltary aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

they found $8540 in his car, part of it in the glove compartment and the rest of it in a suitcase.

Carrigan was carrying $220 with him when arrested.

Police and the FBI also recovered a small arsenal from two of the suspects.

In Tassos' room in Hollywood they found a loaded .25-caliber Colt automatic pistol, a loaded Belgian 9-millimeter automatic and a quantity of ammunition, the FBI said.

In Miskin's room they found an Italian 9-millimeter gun, two .45-caliber Colt automatics, a .25-caliber Colt automatic, a German Mauser, 114 rounds of ammunition, a set of brass knuckles, a blackjack made out of 60 silver dollars covered with leather and a marijuana cigarette.

Carrigan also had four marijuana cigarettes on him when arrested, the FBI said. They added he had a secret compartment under the dash board of his car, which may have been used to store a gun.

The FBI said all three owned new cars.

Tassos has a criminal record dating back 17 years, the FBI said. Charges included assault and robbery.

The FBI said by the time he was 27 years old, he had already served prison terms totaling 10 years. Records show he was last released from a prison in New Jersey on July 16, 1946.

After the Metropolitan bank hold-up, Tassos went to Alexandria, traveled the next day to Charleston, S. C., left the next day for New York City where he spent two days before heading for California, the FBI disclosed.

The FBI said that when Miskin and Carrigan visited Tassos in California last August, they drove back to Wahington in 60 hours, reaching speeds up to 120 miles an hour on the way.

U. S. Farms Produce 3d Largest Harvest

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Nation got good news from its farms yesterday.

The final official crop report for 1950 said this year's harvest is the third largest in history, having been exceeded only in 1948 and 1949.

With harvests virtually completed, the report indicates that this year's production, added to carryovers from previous years, will provide ample supplies of most commodities to meet civilian, military and export demands. Outstanding shortages prevail in the fibers, cotton and wool.

On Wednesday, the Department of Agriculture will make its first forecast on next year's winter wheat crop—planted this fall. Secretary of Agriculture Brannan has asked for a total wheat crop next year of 1150 million bushels, as compared with 1027 million this year.

On Thursday, the department will announce the results of a postcard survey of farmers' plans for hog production. This survey will show how many pigs farmers plan to raise next spring — which will provide pork next fall and winter.

"This year's output exceeds the average of the previous eight years," the Crop Reporting Board stated, "the most productive period in American agriculture.

"Farmers attained this desirable result despite reductions in acreage of several important crops and a growing season that had many unfavorable aspects.

"The composite yield per acre is the second-best of record. A prolonged fall season for maturing and harvesting crops helped improve both quantity and quality of the outturn."

Grading of Harvests

Here's the way the board graded the harvests:

Record: Soybeans, sorghum grain, sugar beets and red clover seed.

Very Large: Corn (fourth largest of record), oats, hay, rice, potatoes, popcorn, tobacco, cranberries, and alfalfa and sweetclover seeds.

Small: Cotton and cottonseed, peaches and apricots.

Very Small: Rye, buckwheat, sorghum forage, dry peas, cowpeas, velvet beans, broom corn and sorgo.

The acreage upon which the 52 principal crops were harvested was about 341 million, the smallest since 1942. It was nearly 16 million acres less than 1949, and close to 21 million acres less than in 1932, the largest of record.

Yields per acre were relatively high, those for all major crops except wheat being above the average. Wheat was above last year.

Compared with last year, heavy reductions were made in the plantings of some of the most important crops, in accordance with acreage allotment laws. Cotton was cut more than nine million acres to 17,850,000; corn nearly four million to 83,302,000; wheat more than 13 million; rice and dry beans each one fourth of a million, and flaxseed one million.

The tonnage of feed grains, from which we get meat, poultry, eggs, and dairy products, was the third largest.

Farm Income Down 1%

This year's total income of all American farmers is slightly below last year — about 1 percent — in spite of higher prices recently.

Until December 1, total farm income was 25,300 million dollars, as compared with 25,663 million in 1949.

Virginia farmers were among the farmers in nine States who got more money for their crops this year than a year ago. The other 39 States got less than in 1949.

How U. S. Crop Totals Compare With Russia's

Here's how American farm production in seven important crops compare with Russia's production.

	United States		Russia
All figures in millions of bushels	Average	1950	Average	1950
Wheat	1031	1026	1240	1110
Rye	32	23	885	910
Barley	311	301	425	325
Oats	1274	1465	1165	750
Potatoes	403	439	2713	2850
Wool, lbs.	373	250	310	325
Corn	2901	3131	170	150

No statistics are available as to livestock in Russia but Agriculture Department experts estimate number to range from twice as many hogs in this country to several times as many cattle, daily animals sheep and lambs.

Crime Probe Is Told Of $271,405 Income

CHICAGO, Dec. 18 (AP).—Two Chicago mobsters filed a $271,405 Federal income tax return in 1949, Senate crime investigators disclosed today.

The investigators immediately tried to show a financial link between the Chicagoans and a Florida gambling syndicate.

The tax return was brought up at the Kefauver committee's first public hearing session in Chicago.

During questioning of Eugene Bernstein, an attorney who handled income tax matters for Tony Accardo and Jack Guzik, committee counsel Rudolph Halley asked:

"If the return shows an item of partnerships, syndicates, pools, etc., S and G Service, loss $7,252.81, would that be an item of loss for this partnership according to the return?"

"Whatever the return would reflect, sir, those would be the facts as presented to me," Bernstein said. He added that he knew nothing whatever about the S and G Service and that Accardo had never discussed it with him.

The S and G Service is a south Florida gambling syndicate.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.), the committee chairman, commented to reporters that the partnership tax return "pretty well" ties together the Florida syndicate and the Accardo-Guzik partnership.

He said committee information "ties" mobsters "up all over the country. That's what we've been trying to do."

Halley said that the Accardo-Guzik tax return of 1949 indicated the partnership received a net profit of $278,666 from a Chicago policy wheel described as the Erie and Buffalo. From this, the S and G loss was deducted.

During the questioning of Bernstein, Halley sought to establish that Chicago Bookmaker Harry Russell had muscled into the S and G Service, suffered a loss for 1949, and that the Accardo-Guzik partnership had paid that loss. Bernstein, however, testified he had no knowledge of such activities.

Two Witnesses Given Committee Subpenas

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18 (AP).—Elmer F. (Bones) Remmer, a kingpin in northern California gambling circles, was released today after questioning in the recent gangland slaying of Mickey Cohen's top lawyer.

Police Capt. James Hamilton said he is satisfied Remmer was not in these parts when Attorney Samuel Rummel was ambushed near his home a week ago.

But the pickup of Remmer, after a Hollywood nightclub brawl, brought him in line for questioning by the Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee.

It has been looking for Remmer and wanted to question him at its hearing in San Francisco last month. When his whereabouts became known today, after he and three companions were arrested on drunk charges, an investigator for the Senate committee handed Remmer a subpoena. Remmer was ordered to appear at a San Francisco session of the committee early next year.

Police said they believe Remmer has been vacationing in Acapulco, Mexico. He and Thomas J. Whalen, 43; Edmund M. Scribner, 48, of Bakersfield, and Rici Raaf red-haired actress of Beverly Hills were booked on drunk charges on complaint of nightclub operator Andy McIntyre, husband of Film Actress Marilyn Maxwell. They were arrested when an Army officer objected to "foul language" in the presence of women.

Whalen also was served with a committee subpena. He was not released. During the investigation here police found a .25-caliber automatic in the quartet's car. Hamilton said Whalen is being held on suspicion of robbery.

Remmer and Scribner were released on $20 bail each on the drunk charges and ordered to appear in court tomorrow. Miss Raaf was fined $20 and released.

Meantime, a routine verdict of homicide by persons unknown was returned by a coroner's jury in the Rummel death.

Doors Bolted

Philadelphia Tracks Clews To Phantom

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18 (U.P.). Scores of detectives ran down a "number of leads" tonight in a 'round-the-clock hunt for a mad sniper who killed a 28-year-old housewife and shot or shot at 13 other persons in a terror-stricken section of North Philadelphia.

But Director of Public Safety Samuel Rosenberg appealed to the public for help in trapping the "phantom" gunman firing in pot-shot fashion from ambush during the past three months.

"This is a horrible character to leave at large," Rosenberg said.

When darkness fell, residents of the Oak Lane section, where the sniper killed Mrs. Charles Cohen Saturday night, again bolted doors and windows and shut blinds for fear that the crazed rifleman might strike again.

As the most intensive police search in city history was pressed for the killer, Rosenberg announced investigators had a "number of promising leads."

His announcement came as Mrs. Cohen, mother of two young boys, was buried from a North Philadelphia funeral chapel. She was the latest victim in a string of shootings which included an 8-year-old boy, six National Guardsmen on sentry duty at an armory, and several housewives. One man was shot at work in a factory.

Only a few minutes before Mrs. Cohen was killed John Diener, 17, standing on a street corner several blocks away, was fired at by a man who sped away in a dark coupe. The bullet missed him—passing through his sleeve.

Alarm was sent out for the arrest of a man about 5 feet, 10 inches tall, slenderly built, with light wavy hair. The description answered that of a man seen leaving the death scene.

Judiciary Unit Rejects Plea For Warrants in Crime Probe

By The Associated Press

The Senate Judiciary committee yesterday told the special Senate Crime committee, in effect, to exhaust its own resources to bring 11 missing witnesses before it before asking the Senate to order their arrest.

The Judiciary group sent back to the Senate a resolution calling on the Senate to order the arrests on grounds of contempt, and recommended it be referred to the Crime committee.

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Crime committee disagreed with the majority and had a minority reported filed in his behalf. His resolution said the 11 witnesses were "important," had not been located despite "diligent search," and were hiding out.

The resolution named them as follows:

The committee aides later told reporters that subpoenas now have been served on Rosen, Marden, Patton and Hartman. Remmer was located yesterday in Los Angeles.

The resolution gives the Senate sergeant-at-arms, Joseph Duke permission to deputize the FBI to aid in locating the missing men.

The Judiciary committee said it was of the opinion that the crime group still had available facilities to force the missing witnesses to appear before it and testify.

It said a committee should not, without specifical justification, attempt to invoke the inherent powers of the Senate before it has exhausted its own powers.

The majority report added that there was no evidence that the crime committee had made specific attempts to serve the missing persons with subpoenas, and added:

"It would appear that more than a mere allegation of diligent search is required."

The committee said it also had learned that the crime group had not enlisted the aid of the sergeant at arms in seeking the missing persons. It could do this on its own authority.

The committee likewise could make a formal record of its attempts to locate the men which could serve as basis for their arrest on contempt charges.

81 Percent Chest

It is not difficult to isolate the superficial causes for the failure of the Community Chest to make its goal for the sixth successive year. About 100,000 gainfully employed persons in the metropolitan area failed to make any contribution whatsoever. If these nongivers had contributed an average of $5 each, the Chest would have come close to making its goal. If they had given an average of $10, the Chest would have been comfortably over the top. Many of these nongivers are employed in small business firms which themselves have offered the Chest little or no support. Before another drive is conducted, one of the imperatives is to reach this group, find out why it is indifferent and try to enlist its support.

A second reason for the community's 81 percent performance is the smallness of the average gift. In the Government service, for example, about 9 out of every 10 employes make some contribution, but the average gift is between $7 and $8. For the entire city the average gift is about $10, including corporate as well as individual gifts, and about one half the Chest supporters give $5 or less. Large gifts are comparatively few in number. Last year only 3500 firms and individuals gave the Chest $100 or more. The statistical picture certainly suggests that, in spite of the excellent work of the fund-raising volunteers, the Chest has not very strongly impressed itself upon the conscience of the community.

Undoubtedly one reason for the Chest's failure to attain its goal is the plethora of drives to which Washingtonians are still asked to contribute. At the same time the 81 percent performance of the Chest (although additional funds are still coming in) is likely to discourage other fund-raising organizations from joining in a single united appeal. On the whole such organizations as the Red Cross, the Heart Association and the Cancer Association have been more successful in realizing their goals here than has the Chest. It is a fact, however, that many other cities are experimenting with united fund campaigns and the trend is toward success. Both Detroit and Philadelphia have just gone over the top with united fund drives, each raising more than 10 million dollars. As against these records, Washington's failure to reach a Chest goal of $4,260,000 is a grave reflection on either its community spirit or its methods.

Certainly the united fund campaign study that was launched here some months ago should now go forward. But we do not think that a merger of all the separate drives into one would be the complete answer. Some means of reaching groups that now ignore the Chest ought to be devised. For this service a second group of public-spirited experts might be drafted. The service they could render would be equal to that of a Community Chest campaign itself.

What Is Truth?

Senator Tydings has made an interesting proposal in charging Senator-elect Butler, who will succeed him in January, with deliberately resorting to "false and deceiving statements" in the recent campaign. Recalling that Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania and Senator-elect Smith of Illinois were denied their seats because of money frauds in their campaigns, Mr. Tydings suggests that use of fraudulent propaganda should also bar the offender from Congress. ". . . a candidate for the Senate should be barred from service there," he said, "if he has knowingly and deliberately made false statements in his campaign or used scurrilous and untrue printed matter calculated to deceive the electorate; or if such totally false statements or material were issued by other persons in his behalf, with his knowledge and consent."

Senator Tydings goes to the record of the Tydings Subcommittee which investigated Senator McCarthy's charges in order to show that some of the campaign propaganda used against him was "totally untrue." The apparent faking of a photograph of Tydings conferring with Earl Browder was also a disgrace. If the voters of Maryland were deceived by these cheap tricks of politics, it is a sad commentary on representative government. But it does not follow that the Senate should refuse to seat Senator-elect Butler or that Congress should pass a law, as Senator Tydings suggests, "to deal adequately with such practices in the future."

Certainly false statements by a candidate's supporters should not be made a basis for denying him a seat. In the case of Senator Newberry the Supreme Court dismissed charges that expenditures in his campaign exceeded the lawful limit partly for want of evidence that he was responsible for the overspending. Guilt by association would be no less repugnant in penalizing candidates for office than in the conviction of accused criminals. And Senator Tydings' suggestion is scarcely less objectionable as applied to the candidates themselves; for it would put the Senate and House in the position of deciding what is truth.

Perhaps there are some political campaigns into which no distortion, misrepresentation, or falsity enters, but we suspect they are rare. Just what degree of falsity would be required to deny a candidate his seat, and who would determine what is true or false? Obviously no acceptable standard could be fixed, and in the absence of such a standard we should have the Senate and House judging each case according to the majority concept of what is false, which might have the effect of unseating the minority. Disgusting as the use of false propaganda is, the remedy must necessarily be left to the electorate in the hope that if it is deceived today it may be enlightened tomorrow.

Chinese Reply

Peking's reply to our Letter to the Chinese of November 24 shows the wide gulf that now exists between the new China and the United States. The reply, which is reprinted on the page opposite, appeared in the official newspaper, Kwangming Daily, and was broadcast. It takes exception to our statement that John Hay's doctrine of the Open Door, and the attendant policy upholding the integrity of China, prevented the breakup of China. On the contrary, said the Chinese newspaper, the doctrine amounted to recognition of the spheres of influence of the imperialist powers in China and opened these up to the United States.

This view of the Open Door, we submit, is only half-right, and as such is worse than erroneous. To be sure, John Hay's purpose was to see that the predatory powers did not squeeze the United States out of China. The easiest solution was to do what the other powers had done and cut for ourselves a slice of the Chinese melon. The situation was that Russia was strongly entrenched in Manchuria, Germany in Shantung, Britain in Hongkong and the coast opposite, with expectations along the Yangtze River, the French in Yunnan and Kwangtung, with the Italians demanding Chekiang and the Japanese Fukien. What was going to happen to America in the race for spheres and concessions? The diplomats on the spot thought that we ought to give consideration to a grab of the Chihli port of Tientsin. However, John Hay felt that the best course was to insist that the spheres should be kept open to commerce of all nations on equal terms.

Certainly John Hay was acting in behalf of the American interest. But in the process of keeping the spheres "open" the partition of China was prevented. For if the spheres had been "closed," as was threatened, then China would have been parceled out, and there would have been no China left. The doctrine could thus be likened to a holding operation—till China's diplomacy gained sufficient strength to develop its own sovereignty out of what our Chinese contemporary properly calls its "semicolonial" status. The Chinese newspaper omits to mention that as America itself grew in power, it led the Western world in the grant of tariff autonomy to China, in a treaty dated July 24, 1928. The United States, indeed, got into some trouble with the other powers for stealing a march on them.

As to the remainder of the Chinese reply, this has no relevance. Aid to Chiang Kai-shek, was not, contrary to what the newspaper says, a consequence of the Open Door policy. The Nationalist or Chiang Kai-shek government happened to be the government of China recognized by all the powers, including Russia. Soviet Russia pledged itself solemnly to give the Chiang Kai-shek government "moral and material" support in the Wang-Molotov agreement of 1945. It was this treaty that validated the Russian grab of Manchurian rail and port concessions under the Yalta deal. Moscow continued to wring concessions out of the Chiang government in such matters as exclusive air and other rights in Sinkiang even after the Chinese Communists had captured Nanking. It followed the Nationalist government to Canton for that purpose. Who, on the record, was the power to "rob China of its territory and sovereignty"? The Soviet Union, of course. Yet the Kwangming Daily would have the Chinese people believe that the shoe was on the other foot, and that it was the Americans who were perfidious. We challenge our Peking contemporary to a debate on this subject provided that both sides are presented in full in both our newspapers.

Cowboy Christmas

Only a two-gun Santa Claus in a cowboy hat is needed to complete the Wild West flavor of this Christmas. A trip through a department store toyland, more properly now a "corral," reveals how strongly the Western legend has taken hold of juvenile America. The rush and grab to get chaps, "bullet-proof" vests, big brimmed hats, plaid shirts, gun and holster sets, leather boots and gloves, testify both to the power of radio and television and to the vitality of America's favorite folk myth. The Wild West boom also may have been stimulated by fear of defense priorities on wool, leather and steel. Recently there was commercial complaint that too much stainless steel was going into production of cowboy cap pistols.

Western legend has long stirred the imagination of American youth, as the movies were quick to realize. But Buffalo Bill anteceded them, and the pilgrims who visit his grave in Colorado show what hold the Western saga has on adults. True, the Western legend has been greatly commercialized, but only because it was recognized as such a good thing in its basic hold on American emotions. And though some questionable influences on youth have come from it, including the irresponsible use of toy firearms, the ideal of the cowboy has helped to shape the American character along lines of courage, fortitude and bold endeavor. It is significant that this ideal continues its hold at a time when the machine is supposed to be making sissies of the population.

Price Regulation No. 1

The order rolling back prices of passenger cars to December 1 was issued hastily—before the Economic Stabilization Agency had completed its study of the effect of recent increases in production costs on company profits. Strictly speaking, it is not a price "freeze." For if a company can prove its inability to earn fair profits without charging more for its products, the ESA promises to change its ceiling price. The chief significance of this price decree is that it gives notice of the Government's intention to break the vicious price spiral resulting from a rise in production costs followed by higher prices of the goods produced and still higher production costs.

The selection of the automobile industry as the guinea pig for this experiment is, to be sure, open to criticism. After all, it is one of the few major industries which have kept prices stable since June; moreover, the proposed increase was less than half of the average post-Korean increase. The logical procedure is to start with controls over prices of raw materials instead of finished goods. Indeed, it is a foregone conclusion that automobile prices cannot be effectively controlled unless the prices of the materials and the wages of the labor used in their manufacture are also controlled. However, a beginning had to be made somewhere and there are obvious advantages from the viewpoint of an understaffed enforcement agency of singling out the automobile industry for a trial run.

The next step should be an extension of controls to commodities such as steel, copper, rubber and other basic raw materials—the prices of which have soared since the Korean war. These controls are essential, not only to prevent automobile manufacturers from being squeezed between steadily rising production costs and fixed price ceilings, but—much more important—to prevent increases in the cost of rearming and in the prices of a wide range of consumer goods.

One of the knottiest problems confronting the Administration is that of wage controls. The law requires stabilization of wages in any industry whose products or services are put under price ceilings. However, any attempt to apply wage controls on a selective basis would be resisted by the unions, and, in any event, would be economic nonsense. And if contracts tying wage adjustments to changes in living costs are scrapped there is bound to be chaos, in the absence of any accepted formula of wage stablization. On the other hand, if those contracts remain in force and living costs continue to rise, the wages of automobile workers will also increase and it may be necessary to raise price ceilings.

Although we do not believe that wages can or should be frozen on a selective basis, we hope that some agreement can be reached to hold the wage line reasonably firm in those industries put under price ceilings until the Government is ready to institute comprehensive controls over prices and wages. It will be some time before a well-balanced, over-all control program can be undertaken and, even then, it cannot be efficiently administered without the cooperation of both organized labor and employers. Meantime, selective controls will have a salutary disciplinary effect on industries that raise prices not because they must but because they can get away with it.

Education And TV

Radio offered great promise, when it first began to develop, that it would afford an immensely important tool to education. It cannot be said that the promise has ever been fully realized. Now television with its combination of sight and sound appeal extends an even brighter hope. Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, who was once general counsel for the Federal Communications Commission, and is now counsel for the Joint Committee on Educational Television, has asked the commission to set aside 20 percent of future television channel allocations for use by educational institutions.

There is no doubt, we think, that educators could make effective use of television. The public interest—which is the criterion by which the FCC has been commanded by Congress to allocate frequencies—demands that they be given an opportunity to try. They were belated claimants in the field of audio broadcasting, and they are none too early even now in TV. All the available channels have already been assigned to commercial stations in New York and Los Angeles. Educational programs, under the direct supervision of educational institutions, ought to be given at least a share of their operating time. And in many communities where only a single TV transmitter is practicable, this may be the best solution.

Of course, TV, like radio, is going to be primarily an entertainment medium—which means commercial broadcasting. And since channels and operating time have great commercial value, it is only reasonable to ask that the educators formulate some concrete proposals for utilization of the facilities they seek. The request that General Taylor has made in their behalf deserves the FCC's most careful and sympathetic consideration. They need to have a place reserved for them on the air. It would be tragic to have the great potentialities of education crowded out of television, as they were largely crowded out of audio broadcasting, before the new medium gets really under way.

No A-Bombs In Asia

If tonight we atom bomb the Chinese, we will lose all Asia tomorrow morning. Not physically, of course, but the hearts of one billion Asians would harden against us. Then the stage would be set for a war against the white, wealthy West by the colored two-thirds of the world—whose heartland is Asia.

This prophecy is made on the basis of six months recently spent in India. Most Indians, we discovered to our dismay, believe that race prejudice in the form of a callousness toward Asian lives—"the teeming Oriental masses"—was behind the choice of Hiroshima. When we visited remote Indian villiages we found that stories about America's racial discrimination had gone ahead of us, creating an atmosphere of antagonism toward America.

If the bomb is used on Asians, we are sure that it would be the last terrible "straw"; an anti-Western process would be accelerated among 700,000 Indian villages which 10,000 atom bombs could not stop. Japanese bombing of China succeeded mainly in rallying most Chinese around Chiang "for the duration." Atom (or even mass strategic) bombing of the Chinese would ultimately rally most Asians around Mao Tse-tung.

It is now vitally necessary to turn our attention, while there is time, to the half of Asia which remains non-Communist, but is a tinderbox for revolution. India is one fifth of the human race, and in many ways stands for a vast majority of mankind who do not want to become military bases for either America or Russia. India should become the testing stone for our policy in Asia.

Indians—like two thirds of the people of the world—are "ill fed, ill housed, ill clothed." And they know they no longer need be. If point four becomes point one, and is done cooperatively through the U. N., we may find ourselves in a creative teamwork with the peoples of Asia. One million tons of our surplus wheat, sent to the Indian provinces starving for lack of wheat, would be a good step; one atom bomb might be our last.

Prayer In The U. N.

In his letter of December 11, Mr. Ottamar Hamele takes exception to my letter of December 6, recommending that the members of the United Nations call on God for light and guidance before each session.

He says: "The Dean (Father Connell) is offended because the United Nations decided not to open its meetings with Christian prayer; overlooking the fact that this is a world organization, and that a Christian service of this kind is not acceptable to millions of God-fearing people." Can Mr. Hamele quote from my letter any words speaking of Christian prayer?

He states in rejoinder to my designation of the attitude of the U. N. as an exclusion of God and a rejection of the Creator that "it is no more so than the failure of our Supreme Court and our many executive departments to begin work each day with a religious ceremony." Did Mr. Hamele ever hear that at the beginning of every session of the Supreme Court the crier proclaims: "God save the United States and this honorable Court?" Most people would regard this as an excellent prayer.

Isolationism Revived

It was not so long ago that the isolationist was a very uncouth fellow, forced to slink along dark corridors and if he as much as let out a peep, he was plastered with invective. Shocked into a deeper study of our position in this tortured world, there is slowly crystallizing the belief that the Western Hemisphere has been dangerously neglected. That, as part of a general policy of defense, the isolationist or home-front point of view merits greater attention.

The fault of bipartisanship and the danger in too much unity in the formation of an over-all defense policy is that it brings policy into a one-way street, and deprives it of the benefit of other opinion that may, after all, be well worth consideration. Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to Great Britain has recently told us that we need defenses in Canada, in the Caribbean and in South America and that the security of the whole hemisphere is tied up with our own. He added that this policy was in accordance with "our historical tradition."

The explosion in Korea seems to have blasted a corridor straight through our policy thinking along which the isolationist may now pass without dodging verbal brickbats from Washington's one-way thinkers. NORMAN S. COOKE.

"Weapons First"

Your December 16 editorial, "Weapons First," on the surface showed sense. However, the quotation "We are drafting today at about as fast a rate as we can receive, equip, accommodate and have adequate cadres," shows the appalling weakness of our leaders.

An editor to meet my ideal would have pointed out that the following could be done:

(1) From National Guard and Reserve organizations not yet called, form instruction teams on a local level based around draft board areas; (2) when a man has passed his first physical at the local level, have him report so many nights per week to the instruction teams to immediately start learning the fundamentals of nomenclature, care of weapons, field sanitation, study of the Articles of War and many other small items which consume endless weeks in a training camp.

This plan would have many advantages: Men in small groups learn much more quickly; one would suffice to teach 20 to 25 men in each style of weapon. When a man finally was inducted, he could carry with him a record of the number of hours he had completed in each course.

In this small town we have at least 10 former officers and enlisted men who would willingly forego any compensation in an effort to be of assistance to the common cause. PAUL S. SMITH.

A Program For The Far East

In Korea as a result of our past errors it is hardly possible to lose any more prestige than has already been lost. Consequently, any negotiation which will enable the whole of Korea to come under United Nations supervision will be a real victory. There will never be hope for permanent peace in the Far East until a sovereign and independent Korea, not necessarily under Syngman Rhee, is realized and supported by the United Nations.

The focus of attention in Japan is the peace treaty. United States control over Japan has reached the limits of its original purpose and the people must be given a chance to reestablish themselves as a modern nation. Naturally, the Soviets will not tolerate a non-Communist Japan taking part in world affairs, particularly in the Far East, but the U. N. should not wait for USSR approval of a treaty. The main difficulty concerning the treaty is the fact that it was China which Japan first attacked, and it is obvious that no treaty with Japan will be successful which entirely disregards the Chinese interest. This, however, leads to the all-important question of who represents China.

There is no need to review the history of our relations with China at this time. It is only necessary to realize that the Chinese revolution, begun by Sun Yat-sen, is still in process and that no other nation has any right to force the people of China to accept a certain political party. The Chinese, along with the Japanese, Koreans, Indonesians and Filipinos have only one common and natural desire—to attain national sovereignty.

Mae Tse-tung and his Chinese Communists control the whole of China, even though there is resistance in many areas. Formal diplomatic recognition would not imply that we accept the Communist form of government as being desirable. Nor would it mean that eventual trade with the Chinese would involve any more than basic economic items.

We should not recognize Communist China with the thought that perhaps it will become another Yugoslavia (although any attempt should not be discouraged), but rather with the hope that the resistance movement against Mao will be encouraged and better able to accomplish its objective. Quite naturally Chiang Kai-shek is opposed to the Communists, but is it for the United States to say who should govern China? Why should the millions of Chinese, who may or may not have freely chosen Mao as their leader, be forced to accept Chiang, simply because he has received Western support in the past and at one time may have had the full support of these same millions?

Formosa, it would seem, is the simplest of all the problems in the Far East. The island of Formosa has never been an integral part of China and the Chinese Communists have no legitimate claim to it. As a matter of fact, Formosa had been under Japanese rule for 50 years preceding 1945 and the United States is as justified in claiming possession as China.

Probably the ultimate future of Formosa should be decided by the Formosans through the United Nations. Until such time, it will be necessary and feasible for the U. N. to keep Formosa neutral by means of sea power, which must not consist entirely of American ships. There have been many other military defeats of political groups and the only obligation we or the U. N. have towards Chiang and members of the Kuomintang is to guarantee the physical safety of all those who may request refuge. Many of the thousands of Nationalist soldiers will want to return to their homes, but all these and other details can best be handled by the United Nations when the time comes.

Three definite steps must be taken by the United States:

1. Urge the United Nations to proceed at once with a Japanese peace treaty, making it clear that only nations within the U. N. will take part in the discussions.

2. Recognize Communist China only when Chinese troops have been withdrawn from all Korea and a U. N. occupation force, excluding Chinese, Soviet and United States troops, has been established to supervise free elections and protect Korean independence.

3. Continue to maintain the neutrality of Formosa until the United Nations is able to determine the final solution of the whole problem.

Limited War With China

By Marquis Childs

Danger To India

THE TEMPO of mobilization is greatly speeded up. This is occurring in an atmosphere of crisis. Whether total war becomes inevitable once these massive wheels have been set in motion is today a question in many minds.

The answer to that question for the immediate future is likely to be found in Asia and the war now being fought there. The United Nations General Assembly has named a three-man committee to try to work out a cease-fire in the Korean war.

But Peiping's Wu Hsiu-chan, in rejecting the U. N. plan, now seems to have definitely closed the door on the possibility of working out a truce. The stumbling block is the island of Formosa and the presence on Formosa of Chiang Kai-shek and what remains of his Nationalist armies.

From both the political and the military point of view it is being taken as increasingly certain that no compromise over Formosa is possible. Since there can be no solution of the Formosa issue, hostilities between the United States and Communist China will continue and expand in geographical area. This is the concept of the limited war which has begun to gain wide acceptance.

In one phase this would consist of a sea-air blockade of the Chinese mainland. In a more advanced phase it would consist of increasing aid to the Nationalists, including landing craft and planes to enable Chiang's forces to join up with anti-Communist guerillas in China.

BEFORE this becomes frozen as policy, it would be well to consider how such an extension of hostilities is regarded by Asians who have sided in one degree or another with the United States and the West in the present conflict. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that for the most part they regard it with dread and horror, for they see flowing from it the following consequences:

Chinese Communist armies will move much faster and further on the flank of India. They will invest all of Tibet. At present the troops invading that remote mountain country have come to something like a standstill about 350 miles from Lhasa, the capital, and in India the belief is that they are pausing to determine whether a truce will be achieved in Korea.

The Chinese will intervene actively in the internal dispute in Nepal which, according to Indian sources, they have not done up to this time. Controlling Nepal, they will materially extend their flanking action on the northwest and northeast.

The Burmese are fearful that limited war against China would send Chinese armies across the border into Burma. They would receive active and widespread support from Communist guerillas that have long endangered the stability of the Burmese government. The power of that government to resist such an invasion is limited, to put it mildly. With Burma occupied, India would be outflanked and in position where a merciless squeeze could be applied.

Limited war against China would be likely to bring an assault on the British crown colony of Hongkong. How long Hongkong could survive an attack by Chinese forces determined to take it is anyone's guess.

AS THE recent Moslem riots have indicated, Britain's position in Malaya with its riches of tin and rubber is doubtful. The most formidable threat is a large fifth column of Chinese that has increasingly come under the direct control of the Red regime in Peiping. The British have had to maintain a considerable armed force in Malaya to keep order, which is one reason they have not been able to send more troops to Korea.

Lastly, there is Indo-China where the border with China, thanks to recent success of Ho Chi-Minh's Communist guerillas, is now open. Here, too, Communist China has the capacity to apply sufficient armed force to drive out the French and there is comparatively little that sea or air power could do to prevent it.

When these consequences are pointed out to the politicians arguing the inevitable necessity of maintaining at least limited hostilities against Red China, their reply is almost automatic. They say that regardless of what the United States might or might not do, the intention of Mao Tse-tung and the men around him in Peiping is to communize all of Asia and a limited war would at the most speed up the process. To force a speed-up might help to throw China off balance since it would prevent preparations considered essential to such far-reaching action.

This is, in essence, an argument that total war against communism has all along been inevitable. And the argument has a terrifying logic inherent in it. But it is not likely to be accepted by those who would feel the crushing blows of the Chinese war machine. They will cling, if only because it is the last refuge of hope, to the belief that the Chinese regime can somehow be brought around to peaceful compromise and they will be likely to blame the United States if all of Asia flames into war.

Republican "Mandate"

Regarding the censure of Mr. Acheson by the Republicans in Congress, they are the first minority in congressional history with a "mandate." Having been able to organize the House but once in 20 years they ought to be careful about raising the question of who has lost confidence in whom.

Whenever they can get control of the Congress by running for office under their own name they will be taken seriously, and their "mandate" soberly considered. Meanwhile, they appear ridiculous.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Isolationist Tide

THERE is indeed a rising tide of isolationist sentiment in this country. It could carry with it a withdrawal that would take us very far, perhaps as far as Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy proposes—that is to say to the positions we occupied in 1939. If this happens, it will be because the people have been taught by the Administration and its spokesmen that there is nothing between globalism of the Truman Doctrine and the isolationism of Mr. Kennedy.

Lippmann

IN NORTH KOREA and in western Germany the globalist policy has suffered great defeats. In Korea it has come perilously near to costing us the flower of our Army. In western Germany the grossly misinformed, miscalculated and misjudged effort to rearm the Germans of our zone is misfiring dangerously.

Offered no choice except to stand guard on the Yalu and the Elbe or to withdraw to our ocean frontiers, how after such disasters could anything but a movement to isolationism be expected? Why in the name of common sense should anyone be surprised that this Nation is withdrawing from the far places where it has met defeat and frustration in order to collect its strength and to collect its wits?

THERE is a disposition in all of us, which is the root of much intolerance, to find, as Disraeli once said, that agreeable men are those who agree with us—and, as he might have added, that those who do not agree with us are cowards or scoundrels or both. Statesmen above all cannot give way to these temptations unless they are to lose all contact with the nations they are supposed to lead or to deal with. The temptation is particularly strong among those who feel they have spent the better part of their lives fighting on the side of the angels.

There is today a crisis of leadership in the free world which is marked by an increasing separation between public policy and popular sentiment. The rising tide of isolationism in the United States is the transatlantic counterpart of the profound and widespread inertia, defeatism, conscientious objection and escapism on the continent of Europe. These popular emotions will not be dealt with by exhortation, or by denunciation, or by pointing out how astutely and ingeniously the Kremlin is exploiting these popular sentiments.

RECENTLY when I was in Europe I did my very best to understand the continental attitudes—that is to say the German and the French attitudes—to the American program of European rearmament. I think I can sum up my own conclusion very briefly by saying that we have appealed to the emotions of Europeans before we have convinced their minds.

There is, of course, in the aftermath of the war a tremendous fatigue of the will which will have to be overcome before the people of the Continent could rise with ardor for a battle. They have been through the total experience of total war. This is an experience which very few indeed can imagine who have not themselves experienced it. Before the peoples of Europe can make the tremendous moral and spiritual effort which is demanded of them they will have to be convinced in their minds that the effort is possible and is rationally directed and that it could succeed.

What is demanded of them is roughly the equivalent to getting out of a sickbed in order to find out how fast you can run up the Washington Monument. The convalescent nations of the European continent will have to be convinced, if they are to make the effort at all, that Mr. Acheson and the Pentagon really do have a clear conception of the European military problem. For myself I found almost no one in high places or in low who had been convinced. It would be difficult enough to lead the war-weary people of Europe if at least their minds had been persuaded. But lacking that, their minds do not reverse and dominate but instead they reinforce their impulses and their instincts.

WE SHALL, I believe, continue to go wrong about Europe if we do not look beneath the defeatism and the passivity. The Germans and the French both lost their armies in the war. What they have not lost, most particularly the Germans, is the belief that in military matters they are experts and teachers and that all others nations by comparison are amateurs and their pupils. On the sea and even in the air the Germans tend to defer to the British and to ourselves. But not on the ground in Europe.

For that reason I feel quite certain myself that the ultimate reason—not the only reason but the ultimate reason—why the German leaders hang back is that they do not believe we have proposed to them an intelligible and workable military plan.

THE RISING tide of American isolationism can, we must hope, take the form of what the market calls a readjustment rather than of a crash. But if reason is to prevail over the isolationist emotion, there must be reason with which to prevail. Great doctrines like the Truman Doctrine must not be improvised merely in order to get some appropriations to support Greece and Turkey. Great commitments involving most of the American Army must not be made in a few excited summer days, reversing the whole strategical judgment of the past. A new doctrine which is far short of the globalism of the Truman Doctrine on the one hand, and of the isolationism of Mr. Kennedy on the other will have to be formulated if the isolationist sentiment is not to become irresistible and overwhelming. The American Nation will not support a policy which demands, as the Truman Doctrine does, the deployment across the two oceans of American ground forces — immensely large for us but absurdly small in relation to their adversaries.

The new doctrine will have to found the defenses of the United States and of the Atlantic community upon sea power and air power—and along with them upon a diplomacy which is conceived and is planned by men who know the limitations and also the advantages of sea and air power.

'Letter To Chinese'

From A Peking Radio Broadcast

ON November 24 The Washington Post wrote a letter to the Chinese. Below is a reply in the Peking official newspaper, Kwangming Daily, of December 13, which was broadcast, and picked up in Washington. It is the broadcast account that is here published:

"Peking, Dec. 13—Today's Kwangming Daily contains an article commenting on the open letter to the Chinese people which appeared in The Washington Post of November 24.

"The open letter claimed that 50 years ago the United States saved China from partitioning by the imperialist powers through the 'Open Door' policy enunciated by United States Secretary of State John Hay in 1899 and that the United States has respected China's territorial unity and administrative independence.

"However, the article explains that throughout the history of China's decline from a sovereign state into a semicolony the United States was one of the arch aggressors who directly or indirectly, openly or secretly, brought suffering upon the Chinese people.

"In reality, the Open Door policy was recognition of the 'spheres of influence' of imperialist powers in China and opened these up to the United States. In other words, it was designed to provide the United States with equal opportunities for exploiting China in the existing arrangement of 'spheres of influence' of other powers.

"It was an international agreement by which China was forced to maintain low customs rates, thus facilitating the import of foreign goods and the export of China's raw materials. It was a policy for enabling foreigners to grab China's ports, finance and administration and to throw China into debt and bankruptcy.

"This Open Door policy was only a mask behind which the United States exploited China and employed the 'most favored Nation' principle jointly with other imperialist powers, because at that time the United States was not yet in a position to exclude the 'spheres of influence' of the other powers.

"On July 18 the United States made an attempt to organize a four-power financial group jointly with Britain, France and Japan in order to monopolize loans to China and to gain control over China's domestic affairs.

"The article goes on to remark that The Washington Post shamelessly lists the United States loans to Chiang Kai-shek for attacks on liberated areas as a kind of aid to China. To emphasize further how nonsensical is The Washington Post's claim to United States benevolence toward China, the Kwangming Daily article notes that the Chinese people well remember how United States imperialists aided the Chiang Kai-shek clique in slaughtering millions of Chinese people by supplying it with nearly six billion dollars and large quantities of arms.

In addition, the United States signed a series of treaties with Chiang Kai-shek to rob China of its territory and sovereignty. All this was a consequence of the Open Door policy to 'maintain China's territorial unity and administrative independence,' about which The Washington Post is stupid enough to brag. In a word, United States imperialists are and always have been the enemy of the Chinese people."

Wounded Captain Reluctantly Praises N. Korean Fighters

Reluctant tribute to the fighting abilities of the North Korean soldiers was paid yesterday by Capt. Richard L. Gruenther, a new arrival at Walter Reed General Hospital.

Capt. Gruenther

Captain Gruenther, 26, son of the Army's deputy chief of staff for plans, Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, said they were "good soldiers in my opinion.

"We had some vicious attacks a couple of nights.

"They acted as if they wanted to get killed, and they did.

"This is only my personal opinion, but they acted as if they were doped up."

Hit in Chest

Captain Gruenther was struck by a bullet in the chest which pierced his lung, liver and diaphragm on November 17.

He was commanding "Charley" company, First Battalion, Seventeenth Infantry Regiment, Seventh Division, at the time—23 miles south of the Yalu River.

He expressed regret yesterday that he was not present when the company arrived at the Manchurian border in the "be-home-by-Christmas" push, but said with a twinkle, "I made it home."

In describing his last day of action—"it was 10 below zero when the attack began, zero at noon; at least 31 of the 35 men in the lead platoon were casualties"—the slim blond 6-footer neglected to mention that he was awarded the Silver Star that day.

Disregarded Safety

It was for disregarding his own personal safety in trying to bring up tanks to fire on hidden machine guns.

Ten days earlier, Gruenther, who was graduated from West Point in 1946, had received his captain's bars in a battlefield promotion.

About that North Korean cold: "I've been in cold places, but when you live in a foxhole and can't start a fire, it is pretty cold.

"Our division had two years of winter training in Japan, and was well equipped, but we had many men freeze their ears and noses. Two men froze to death in their Arctic sleeping bags," he said, "but maybe they had gotten warm and opened them."

Senate to Act on Move to Kill Slot Machine Shipment Ban

The Senate is slated to vote today on a move by Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) to kill the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines.

Malone yesterday filed a motion to send the slot-machine bill back to a joint House-Senate conference. If successful, his maneuver will probably shunt the measure away from any chance of enactment by this Congress.

He filed the motion during an hour's husky-voiced attack on the bill. He said he had laryngitis, and that he was caught "off guard" by the move to clear the conference report on the bill. He had talked 11 hours and 8 minutes against the measure in a one-man filibuster fight on September 21.

The move to refer the bill back to the conference committee was left undecided, and is to be the first order of business today.

The bill was brought before the Senate by Chairman Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), of the Commerce Committee. He explained that he delayed presenting it because Malone had been in Latin America inspecting public-works projects.

Johnson read the Senate a letter from Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, who warned Congress the bill will die unless it is passed at the present short session. Slightly different versions have been passed by the House and Senate.

But Malone, squeaking and wheezing in scarcely audible tones, said the bill would nullify a 23-year-old Nevada law. Passage of the bill would mean that States where slot machines are legal, such as Nevada, would have to act again to exempt themselves from the law.

One of Brentano's sales people has a 14 year old nephew to whom she refuses to give gifts of clothing because "he grows so fast." Carbon-Copy Costs On Tools Suspected

By The Associated Press

Representative Olin E. Teague (D., Tex.) said today the Justice Department will be asked to investigate carbon-copy "competing" bids submitted by three watchmaking equipment firms to a war veterans training school.

Teague, chairman of a special House committee investigating the GI training program, made the statement after hearing testimony from President J. K. Marshall of the C. & E. Marshall Co., Chicago, and Ray C. Wolf, vice president of the firm.

Marshall told the committee he did not know how it happened that bids submitted by his firm and the United States Jewelers Supply Co., also of Chicago, were carbon copies. He said it probably was "done for convenience."

Wolf testified that U. S. Jewelers was set up by Marshall as a distributing agency, with G. A. Scott, a Marshall accountant, as its president.

The bids were submitted to the Waco (Tex.) School of Horology (watch-making), to be paid for by the Veterans' Administration under the G. I. training program. A third bid was submitted by the Trojan Supply Co., Tyler, Tex.

Walter Bachus, owner of Trojan, testified previously that Marshall sent its bid to him before he set his own bid for the equipment. The U. S. Veterans' Administration requires competitive bids from at least three firms.

Teague said the testimony indicates "there may be collusive practices and fraud" in the case and that it will be referred to the Attorney General.

The committee has heard testimony that a number of schools set up "dummy" corporations, bought supplies from them at a discount and then charged the Government full price.

Czech Spy Sentenced By U. S. Zone Court

REGENSBURG, Germany, Dec. 18 (AP). — A United States High Commission court today sentenced Oldrish Mihola, 22-year-old Czech spy, to seven years in prison. The prosecutor said it was probably the most serious espionage case thus far in the United States Zone of Germany.

District Attorney J. I. Rudolph said Mihola had information of the "highest restricted nature."

Mihola pleaded guilty to charges of communicating and attempting to communicate military information to Czechoslovakia.

The Washington suggestion was made Saturday. Reports received so far showed the governments of Brazil, Colombia, Cuba, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru and Uruguay as also favorable to the proposal.

London Envoy Post Rejected By Gov. Dewey

By the United Press

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, twice-defeated Republican candidate for President, turned down an invitation by President Truman last August to become United States Ambassador to Great Britain, informed sources said yesterday.

Dewey was asked to become Ambassador by Secretary of State Dean Acheson at a private meeting in New York. Acheson told Dewey he was making the request on orders from President Truman.

After Dewey returned his decision not to accept the ambassadorship, Mr. Truman named Walter Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., to succeed Lewis Douglas at the Court of St. James.

Indian Permitted To Go Back to His 'Stinking Platoon'

Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps, has granted the wish of Marine Sergeant Robert J. Ward to rejoin his "dirty, stinking and loyal platoon" in Korea.

Technical Sergeant Ward, 25, a full-blooded Cherokee indian of Los Angeles, was ordered out of the Korean fighting recently to a desk job in Tokyo. His mother, Mrs. Glenn Peterson of Inglewood, Calif., wife of an aircraft machinist, had claimed the right to have her last surviving son placed in a non-combat zone. Two other sons had been killed in World War II.

But Sergeant Ward, who is married and has a baby daughter, persuaded his mother to cancel her request. In a letter to her he said his "dirty, stinking and loyal platoon" needed him.

General Cates commented yesterday:

"The Marines need men like Technical Sergeant Robert J. Ward."

Hiring Rules Eased By Civil Service For Defense Workers

The Civil Service Commission yesterday simplified its hiring rules for defense agencies. It has delegated to the boards of examiners in those agencies the authority to:

Lower requirements for exams, both mental and physical; shorten exam announcements; simplify rating procedures; hire and place the job immediately qualified persons in shortage occupations; give priority to local area residents; and act for the commission in approving promotions and in re-employing former employes.

In addition, the commission has given its regional offices the authority to further streamline regulations whenever necessary. In other words, the hiring door is being thrown open in order to take care of the stepped up recruiting.

The order covers both per diem and classified workers.

AFGE: Two more possibilities for national president of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes are: Henry W. Rempe, a long-time AFGE member who is assistant director of Civil Service's field staff, and Representative Andrew J. Biemiller (D., Wis.), who failed to be re-elected. Biemiller, a former AFL employe, was an AFGE member when he worked for Uncle Sam.

VA: A management study of the Veterans Administration will be made by Booz, Allen & Hamilton, a Chicago engineering firm. The survey, to cost about $500,000, will begin next month.

VA Administrator Gray said the purpose of the study is to determine "whether changes in the organization and operation procedures are necessary to provide the best possible service to veterans at the lowest possible cost."

A similar survey was conducted two years ago by the Hoover Commission. The Hoover plans for VA were sidetracked.

LEAVE: You won't get any additional Christmas, or shopping, leave this year. Friday will be a full work day as usual, and so will Saturday for employes who must work on that day. In normal times, it has been the custom to give employes an afternoon off before the Christmas holiday.

LONGER HOURS: These are additional developments on the plan for a longer work week in Government.

1. Some of the military activities where vital work is pressing and manpower is short will be authorized to go on 6-day, 48-hour work weeks early in January. These will be mainly Army arsenals, Navy yards, supply depots, etc., although more and more people in the Pentagon and in other military offices here and nearby also will go on longer hours.

2. The Civil Service Commission, at the direction of the White House, is fixing standards and conditions under which other agencies will be permitted to place all or part of their employes on either 44 or 48-hour work weeks.

3. The problem of how to pay employes for overtime may be dropped into the lap of Congress. Some officials are quietly advocating that Government people, classified and postal, be paid straight time for all hours over 40 in any one week.

They make this argument: that the Government now spends 8 billions annually for salaries; that to pay them full time-and-a-half for overtime would cost an additional $2,300,000,000 for a 48-hour week, and boost the take home pay of most employes by 30 percent.

Straight time pay for a 48-hour week would cost about $1,500,000,000 annually and increase by 20 percent the take home pay of the average Federal worker.

4. Another problem is how to handle annual leave of employes on a longer work week. Will an employe who is ordered to work a 48-hour week be charged with a day's annual leave if he takes the sixth day off? And what if he takes off a regular work day, say Wednesday, and works Saturday, the sixth day, will be he paid overtime for Saturday work?

Those are just a few of the questions and problems that are worrying Federal officials.

The Labor Department's Office of Defense Manpower also is very interested in the subject of longer hours as it has general authority over the manpower field. It will work with the commission and the Budget Bureau in determining when agencies should be placed on longer hours.

Skull and Bones Discovered By Excavators at 12th & E Sts.

The Washington Post

UNEARTHED—Curtis Elder, an oiler on a steam-shovel, holds a skull and the leg bones of a shattered skeleton found in the excavation for the Perpetual Building Association's new building at 12th and E sts. nw. Site is believed to have been location of a Civil War hospital

Workmen excavating for the new Perpetual Building Association building at 12th and E sts. nw. yesterday discovered a human skull and other bones.

The skeletal remains, found about 14 feet below the surface and apparently buried for many years, were taken to the District morgue, where they will be examined today by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald.

Homicide squad detectives also were studying the case.

E. L. Whitworth, in charge of construction for the E. L. Whitworth Bank Building & Equipment Corp. of America, of St. Louis, Mo., said the bones were found in the remains of what had once been an outdoor toilet.

The bones were found by Whitworth and Curtis Elder, oiler on the steam shovel.

The skull bore an indentation about the size of a nickel, from which several cracks appeared to radiate, in the center of the frontal bone.

Whitworth said the number of bones suggested two bodies may have been buried there.

Edward C. Baltz, president of the building association, whose present quarters adjoin 1105 E st., said he understood the old building on that site had been used as a hospital during the Civil War.

Finding human bones is not a new experience to him, Whitworth said. Once in St. Louis he dug into an ancient Indian cemetery, and another time when excavating there he found a skeleton in the basement of an old house.

Judge Raps 2 Attorneys On Conduct

Defense Lawyers In Dope Case Draw Sharp Rebuke; One Is From District

BALTIMORE, Dec. 18 (Spl.).—The chief judge of Federal District Court here took time out today, during the sentencing of a Washington dope-peddler, to deliver a sharp tongue-lashing to two defense attorneys.

The attorneys are Curtis P. Mitchell of 1119 Lamont st. nw. Washington, and J. Franklin Bourne of Baltimore. Their client, Horace W. Butler, 31, was sentenced to 4½ years for selling heroin and marijuana to servicemen at Andrews Air Force Base earlier this year.

In the unusual dressing down, Judge William C. Coleman threatened to suspend Mitchell and Bourne from practice in his court if they repeated the conduct of which he complained.

"This court feels that the conduct of Mitchell and Bourne was reprehensible in many respects, and the court is not willing to conclude this case without referring to the wasted time, the trivialities and the specious arguments of the defense," the judge said.

He termed their defense of Butler "no defense whatsoever." He accused them of wasting time and Government money by filing "numerous and groundless" preliminary motions and having brought to court Federal prisoners whose "testimony was of no aid to the defense."

The judge said if the defense lawyers' actions "were done through ignorance then you never should have been permitted to practice in this court. If they were done deliberately and you do it again, you will be suspended from further practice in this court. You came very near to suspension during the trial."

Turning to Mitchell, Judge Coleman said, "if you are allowed to go along like that in the District of Columbia, this court is amazed that such conduct is permitted."

Obviously angered, Mitchell took exception to the comments of the court and said it was the first time in his eight years at the bar that he had been "treated like that."

He had never suffered such "humiliation," Mitchell said, and offered to prove that "error has been committed in this case." Bourne joined in the exception.

To the defendant, Judge Coleman said, "I am not prejudicing your case, because the court is satisfied that you are not as much responsible as your lawyers."

Butler received the same sentence as five other men who had pleaded guilty to a similar charge during the past two months.

Christmas Services Are Held at Cathedral; Many Other D. C. Holiday Events Scheduled

By Jack Laarta, The Washington Post.

AWAY IN THE MANGER—Armistead P. Rood, 6, of 3520 35th st. nw., and Betsy Nuse, 3, of 5256 Watson st. nw., inspect the creche depicting the Bethlehem scene at Christ's birth. They attended a children's service at Washington Cathedral yesterday

Washington's Cathedral's 14th century interior resounded with youthful voices yesterday as pre-Christmas programs in the area moved toward a climax.

More than 650 students from the three Cathedral schools helped unfold the Christmas story—both in song and scriptures—in the traditional carol services.

The Rev. Charles Martin, canon of the Cathedral and headmaster of St. Albans School for Boys, gave the opening prayer, while Miss Katherine Lee, principal of the National Cathedral School for Girls, read the fifth lesson.

To 12-year-old Barbara Church, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. H. Church, 3253 Worthington st. nw., and a student at the Cathedral Girls School, went the honor of reading the first lesson from the lectern.

75 Children Participate

Later in the afternoon, more than 75 children from the Cathedral neighborhood participated in services in the Children's Chapel, a highlight of which was the placing of the figures in the altar creche of the holy family, the shepherds, wise men and animals.

Many Christmas programs are scheduled for today.

Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath will attend a party for 55 boys from the National Training School at 12:15 in the Burlington Hotel. The event is sponsored by the Washington Exchange Club.

Children of St. John's Orphanage, 1922 F st. nw., hold their annual Christmas party at 3:30 p.m. in the ballroom of the National Press Club. Brooke Johns will be master of ceremonies.

Third graders from Chevy Chase Elementary School will present gifts to 38 young patients at Children's Hospital at 2 p. m.

Program to Be Broadcast

A half-hour holiday program by the 55-voice American Red Cross chorus will be broadcast throughout the United States and to many parts of the world from the Departmental Auditorium at 4:30 p. m. It will include a message from E. Roland Harriman, newly appointed Red Cross president, and will feature excerpts from the story of the Nativity.

Members of the Organized Naval Reserve in the Washington area will hold their annual Christmas party at Heurich's Recreational Hall, 26th and D sts. nw., starting at 8:30 p. m.

The annual Christmas tree-lighting ceremony at Walter Reed School, 1644 N. McKinley rd., Arlington, will be held from 7 to 8 p. m. Thursday on the school grounds.

The Alexandria Barber Shop Quartet will lead singing of carols, and the Rev. Barker Hardison, pastor of the Westover Baptist Church, will tell a Christmas story. Canned goods will be accepted as gifts to be distributed to welfare agencies.

Sponsoring the program are the Highland Park-Overlee Knolls Citizens Association, the Westover Civic Association, Westover merchants, and the Walter Reed P-TA.

The Killeen Post of the American Legion will sponsor a Christmas party for boys from the Georgetown Boys Club from 4 to 6 p. m. today at the post clubhouse,

Civil Defense Lags Badly, Fondahl Tells Chest Heads

District Planning Only 15% Complete Now, Community Leaders Informed

Washington is now only 15 percent prepared in the event of an air raid, Inspector John E. Fondahl, acting director of civil defense, told the United Community Services Board of Trustees of the Community Chest yesterday.

The major problem is lack of money, he said. And today he is scheduled to appear before the Senate Appropriations Committee to discuss that handicap.

Progress is also being hampered—although headquarters is swamped with calls from volunteers—by people who are not willing to take training courses now. In turn, they could instruct others as emergencies appear imminent, he said.

'Eventually the civilian defense program will take in practically every man, woman and child in the District. Only 1 percent of civil defense personnel will be paid. All groups must be supplemented by vounteers," Fondahl stressed.

Air raid warning services are not adequate, he said. There are no shelters yet, and it will take months—perhaps years—to have them.

How to avoid panic among civilians is another great problem, Fondahl pointed out.

Every person should know what to do to protect himself; how and where to take cover in an attack without warning and in one in which there is sufficient warning. Everyone, he said, should learn those elementary rules.

Present warning plans are the Red and the White. The Red—a three-minute siren blast, the note rising and falling — is the raid warning. The White—three one-minute blasts with intervals of two minutes—is the all-clear. Stationary fire and police vehicles will give the signals.

D.C. Compares Favorably

In the over-all civilian defense picture, however, Fondahl said Washington compared favorably with other cities throughout the Nation and has set the pattern in some cases.

The first comprehensive—but still tentative—attempt to blanket the activities of the Emergency Welfare Division of Civilian Defense was outlined by Gerard M. Shea, deputy director of that division.

Plans are being considered for enlisting the help of hotels, large restaurants and every feeding place in the District. Shea expects to recruit a nucleus of 3500 people. Griffith Stadium and large halls would be used in "mass feedings" necessitated by an all-out attack on the city.

Support Pledged

Two organizations were recommended and approved for general membership in the UCS at the meeting—the Federation of Civic Associations with 6000 members and the Merriweather Home for Children. Jerome B. McKee, of the UCS executive committee, presented the recommendations. Recreations Services, Inc., operating agency for the Armed Services Hospitality Committee was accepted for membership on a Chest-support basis after recommendations of Duane M. Paul of the executive committee.

Ambrose Sued By Baltimore Motor Firm

Ex-Postal Official Named in $50,000 Suit Based on Stamp Sale

Harold F. Ambrose, who faces trial next month on charges of fraud in a $630,000 stamp swindle, was sued for $50,000 in District Court yesterday.

Ambrose is accused of operating the stamp scheme while he was special assistant to the Postmaster General.

Yesterday's suit was filed by the Motor Sales Co., a Baltimore, Md., corporation.

R. Bruce Livie, the corporation president, is one of several persons who have said they gave Ambrose money for the purchase of commemorative stamp issues.

In the suit, Ambrose is charged with wrongfully converting to his own use $50,000 paid to him by the corporation, and obtaining the money under false pretenses.

Police Renew Pay Boost Bid In Montgomery

Montgomery County Police last night filed a petition asking the County Personnel Board to reconsider its earlier decision and grant them equal pay with Washington Police. The board meets tonight at Rockville.

The petition states that income taxes have eaten up the small raise police have received, that the cost of living has risen rapidly, that Prince Georges County Police have been given an increase and that Washington Police expect an increase.

Higher pay would mean better morale and enable policemen to consider policing a career instead of a stepping stone to better paid employment, the petition states.

Adventists Campaign For Yule Aid to Needy

The youth societies of 12 Washington area Seventh-Day Adventist churches are conducting a drive this week to provide Christmas food and entertainment for children.

17 in City, 10 in Suburbs Seen for Today

Subfreezing temperatures, with a low of 10 degrees above zero in the suburbs and 17 in the District early this morning, were forecast for Greater Washington today.

The Weather Bureau said there was every prospect this winter's record low of 17 degrees on November 26 would be broken. The mercury was not expected to rise above 33 degrees all day. Skies will be clear and sunny in the morning, with clouds in the afternoon, the Weather Bureau predicted.

For the outlying areas in Virginia and Maryland, an even colder spell was in sight. With clear and colder weather in both States forecast, the western area expected a low between 5 and 15 degrees, while the East looked for a 15-20 degree range. Low for yesterday was 20 degrees in the early morning.

Moose Club Head Cleared In Gambling

Testimony Shows Bethesdan Sick At Time of Raids

Lester L. Miller, 41, 444 Grosvenor lane, Bethesda, was acquitted of gambling charges yesterday by Trial Magistrate James R. Miller in Bethesda, Md., Police Court.

Miller is governor of the Bethesda Moose Club where police said they found five punchboards during a raid December 2. He was charged with possession of gambling paraphernalia. Miller was not present at the club when the raid was made but was arrested because of his position as governor.

After testimony that the defendant was ill at home at the time of the raid, Judge Miller said there was not enough evidence to convict.

Officials of the Silver Spring Moose Club and the Elks Club in Silver Spring are scheduled to appear today in Silver Spring Police Court on similar charges. Slot machines, not in operation and stored, were found on club premises, police charge.

Symphony Votes Mitchell Bid for Another Year

The directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association voted unanimously yesterday to ask Howard Mitchell to remain as conductor of the orchestra for the 1951-52 season.

In announcing the decision to offer Mitchell a contract for another year, Raymond E. Cox, president of the association, said:

"Dr. Mitchell, in the space of one year, has more than justified the trust which has been given him. He has built the National Symphony Orchestra into one of the outstanding orchestras in the country, an orchestra of which Washington can be very proud. The board of directors is confident that the public will stand behand and support its decision . . ."

Court Dismisses Libel Suit Filed By Weightlifter

District Court Judge Walter M. Bastian yesterday dismissed a $100,000 libel suit against Time, Inc., filed by R. Keith Kallio, a former policeman and weightlifting champion.

Kallio charged that he was libeled in March 1949, when Life ran a picture of his 3-year-old daughter, Dianne, lifting a weight with her stomach, and said "for such torment, she is later rewarded with ice cream."

Judge Bastian ruled that both the picture and the caption constituted fair comment.

Memory Pays Off

Familiar Face Proves to Be Safe Suspect

A police officer's good memory and obesrvation led to the arrest of two safe-cracking suspects, arraigned yesterday on housebreaking and grand larceny charges.

To acting Lieut. Irving Lubore, of the safe squad, goes credit for apprehension of the two, police said.

He spotted one of them, identified as Ezell Jones, 34, of 1820 Kalorama rd. nw., driving a stake body truck. Lubore was cruising with two partners, Precinct Detective Michael J. Apperti and Detective John W. Hayes Saturday night.

Lubore recognized Jones as a man he arrested in 1943 for a series of safe jobs for which Jones was sentenced to serve 3 to 9 years.

Taking a closer look at the truck, Lubore saw in the rear of it a sledge hammer, crow bar and other tools—enough to make him really perk up, he said.

Patiently, the three policemen followed the truck for three hours until it came to the rear of the Blue Mill Coffee Co., 3412 Georgia ave. nw.

When Jones and Morris Johnson, 25, of 2001 Portner pl. nw., got out, Lubore and his partners questioned them.

Lubore said Johnson readily admitted they had planned to take the safe from the coffee company's office, and even admitted both of them broke into the Acme Store at 2744 14th st. nw. on November 21. They removed a safe there, getting $700, Johnson admitted, according to Lubore.

Jones and Johnson were taken before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday and charged with the Acme Store housebreaking and safe larceny. Jones was also charged with the theft of $400 from the real estate office of Edward Jones at 2217 14th st. nw. on November 5.

The driver, John Michael Hoffman, jr., 23, of 5002 Cheyenne pl., Branchville, perished while trapped in the flaming truck after crashing into the rear of a truck at the intersection of Route 50 and Route 301.

The trailer of his tanker jackknifed and turned on its back as the cab plunged off the road in flames, police said. Anne Arundel County police, who identified Hoffman's body, said the other truck was driven by Isaih Sweet, of Baltimore, who was charged with manslaughter and reckless driving.

Four ambulances from West Annapolis and fire apparatus from four nearby town responded, but no one was able to extricate him from the cab. Traffic on Crain hwy. was delayed for about two hours while firemen fought the blaze.

Mr. Hoffman, a native of Natick, Mass., was a Marine Corps veteran. His widow, the former Olive Virgin, worked for five years at the David Taylor Model Basin.

Driver Gets 2½-Year Term In Death of Arlington Boy, 12

The driver of an automobile which struck and killed a 12-year-old Arlington boy received a 2½-year prison sentence yesterday in Arlington Circuit Court.

James Walter Ford, 37, of 337 I st. sw., was sentenced after Judge Walter T. McCarthy read a probation report on Ford. A Circuit Court jury found Ford guilty of manslaughter in June and recommended the 2½-year term.

Ford's car struck Fred Lehman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Lehman, 117 S. Aberdeen st., on January 27, 1950. The accident occurred at Lee blvd. and Park dr.

Three Falls Church youths who robbed a hitch-hiker of $7 were given eight-year suspended sentences and placed on probation. They are William A. Monch, 19, of Route 2; Charles E. Goldsmith, 21, of 608 North st., and Joseph J. Catte, 21, of 222 W. Greenway blvd.

Before Catte was sentenced yesterday, Fairfax County Sheriff John E. Taylor testified the youth had an "excellent reputation" in the Falls Church area. Sheriff Taylor also offered to accept probation responsibility for Catte.

Judge McCarthy gave eight-year prison sentences to Clyde E. Williams and Earl L. Huffman, 24, both of 1216 14th st. nw., for the $130 armed robbery of an Arlington filling station July 28.

74-Year-Old Man Interrupts Yule Card Writing, Kills Self

A retired real estate man interrupted his chore of addressing Christmas cards yesterday morning, went to the basement of his home, and shot himself to death, police reported.

He was David R. Thomas, 74, of 1422 Shepherd st. nw., who was pronounced dead at the scene at 10:30 a. m. Police said he had shot himself once in the right temple with a .32 caliber revolver.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of death by suicide.

Thomas' wife, Mrs. Lola Thomas, told police her husband was writing cards to friends when he suddenly went down to his workroom in the basement. A few minutes later she heard a single shot, she said.

She found her husband slumped in a swivel chair, the revolver at his side.

Mrs. Thomas told police her husband had feared for some time that he would lose his sight. A doctor recently told him he was getting a cataract on one eye but said it was not serious, she told police.

Mrs. Thomas is her husband's sole survivor. Funeral services and burial will be private.

Zoning Unit Reports on Dry Cleaners

A committee of the District Zoning Commission, appointed several months ago to consider location of small dry cleaning establishments, yesterday issued these findings:

1. Concentration of chlorinated hydrocarbon fumes emitting from the stacks of cleaning houses are not "injurious to health" but conditions found within some establishments are "unpleasant" and in some cases "possibly unhealthful."

2. Health officers on the fact-finding group called the fumes which emitted from the establishments "noisome." Industry members disagreed.

3. There was agreement that health regulations as well as zoning control are "advisable and enforceable."

4. Recommendation that the Health Department prepare health and inspection regulations to cover the industry. The cost of the additional inspection staff, it was suggested, could be financed through higher license fees.

But the finding of the committee appeared to give little assistance to the underlying controversy which started the investigation, namely: whether small cleaning establishments may locate in areas zoned first commercial. The District Health Department wants them kept not less than 75 feet from residential areas.

The dry cleaners, on the other hand, want to be allowed to operate establishments, employing five or less persons, anywhere in a first commercial zone.

Until June, 1949, zoning regulations were in line with the broader demands of the dry cleaners. Last February it was again proposed that the original proposal be restored, thus permitting the smaller cleaning establishments to locate anywhere in a first commercial zone.

Symington Seen as Next Defense Head

By The Associated Press

A White House source said yesterday that President Truman is considering W. Stuart Symington as his next Secretary of Defense.

This source, who did not want to be quoted by name, said he expects Symington to get the office eventually, but that no date has been set.

He would succeed Gen. George C. Marshall, whom President Truman has called out of retirement three times to tackle grave problems. Marshall will be 70 years old on December 31.

The President asked Marshall to become Secretary of Defense when he accepted Louis A. Johnson's resignation from that po last September 12.

The White House source said the President feels that he cannot ask the General to continue the heavy duties of the defense post indefinitely and wants to be ready to name Symington when Marshall decides he has had enough.

Meanwhile, the official told a reporter, Symington will remain on as chairman of the National Security Resources Board, where the President feels his services are needed urgently for the present.

It was reported reliably that Symington was disappointed when the President, in setting up the new office of defense mobilization, made its director—Charles E. Wilson—boss of the Nation's economy. In his post, Wilson takes over a spot that previously was held to some extent by Symington as NSRB head.

Symington scoffed at the report, however, saying there was no foundation for it.

3 Nations' Currencies Barred by Red China

HONGKONG, (Tuesday) Dec. 19 (AP).—Communist China today was reported to have suspended all transactions in the currencies of the United States, Canada and the Philippines.

The action, reported in a special dispatch to the pro-Communist Hongkong newspaper Ta Kung Pao, was seen as a move toward severance of economic relations with the three countries.

Gibson Selection Approved

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved the nomination of former Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson to be a member of the Displaced Persons Commission.

Sweden Needs No ECA Aid in '51, Spokesman Says

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 18 (AP).—A Foreign Office spokesman said tonight Sweden sees no need for participation in the Marshall Plan in 1951.

His statement followed unofficial reports in Paris and Washington that this country will follow Britain's example by not asking for further help from the Economic Cooperation Administration.

Sweden expects to satisfy her dollar and gold needs through the European Payments Union (EPU) and by exporting to non-European countries, the spokesman added.

He asserted that Sweden has received no outright grants from ECA, having obtained only a $20,400,000 loan during 1948-49.

During 1948-50 Sweden earned about 85 million dollars through exports to other European countries under the Marshall Plan. The country started with a dollar deficit in EPU because of the ECA loan but is expected to be back in the black this year through EPU transactions.

Rhee Denies Executions Of Children

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 18 (AP).—President Syngman Rhee today quoted a United Nations observer in denying reports that children have been executed by the South Koreans as war criminals.

At the same time, the president said trials and executions would be speeded, "in view of the military situation and lack of prison facilities."

Rhee said the U. N. observer, Col. F. E. White, a British officer, witnessed exhumations in prison cemeteries northwest of Seoul, and saw no bodies of children.

There have been no illegal executions, the president said.

All those put to death had been tried, convicted and duly sentenced, he said, adding that the executions were carried out by wardens of the Mape and Westgate prisons and not by police, as had been reported.

As part of the trial speedup, Rhee said he would establish a review board for death sentences.

Parley Resumes Rail Strike Negotiations

By the United Press

Railroad union and management negotiators resumed their meeting at the White House last night, apparently prepared for another long bargaining session aimed at ending the 21-month-old railway wage dispute.

White House Press Secretary Joseph Short announced the conferees returned shortly after 9 p. m., and began a new series of separate conferences with Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman. Short said Steelman would call the negotiators into joint sessions "very shortly."

The night meeting followed a four-hour afternoon conference at which the spokesmen for both sides appeared confident they were nearing a settlement of the disagreement.

The earlier session began at 2 p. m. It broke up at 6 p. m. after the conferees had "talked wages." The negotiators used the "break" in the meetings to report back to their respective groups.

Some sources were hopeful that a settlement would be reached soon in the lengthy dispute which erupted into last week's scattered wildcat strikes.

Toledo Walkout Ends

New hopes of a speedy agreement were raised when wildcat strikers in the Toledo area ended a brief walkout shortly after presidential assistant John R. Steelman called the new talks at 2 p. m.

The Toledo workers began their walkout early yesterday but heeded warnings by leaders of the railroad trainmen that the strike was hampering negotiations. The carriers have refused to bargain while men are on strike.

Steelman said before the meeting that "some prograss was made in negotiation conferences Sunday and that both the unions and carriers believed more progress would be made yesterday.

The Toledo switchmen followed the pattern of last week's walkouts by reporting "sick" in an effort to "force action" on their contract demands. Railroads affected were the Baltimore and Ohio, Wheeling and Lake Erie, and Detroit and Toledo Shore Line.

Small groups of trainmen also were still idle in Chicago on the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern and the Chicago and Illinois Midland railroads. Both railroads said there was no curtailment of service.

Wildcat Strikes End

Elsewhere the wildcat strikes which brought anti-strike court orders and a parcel post embargo last week had ended. The men began returning to their jobs Saturday after President Truman warned they were endangering the Nation's safety.

Sources close to the White House negotiations reported substantial progress was made at talks which began at 3:45 p. m. Sunday and did not break off until 2:45 a. m. yesterday. There were hopes the dispute can be settled within a few days at the most.

Present at the conferences were heads of the brotherhoods of trainmen, conductors, locomotive engineers and firemen and enginemen. A three-man team represented eastern, western and southern carriers.

The unions are demanding 48 hours pay for a 40-hour work week for the yardmen—estimated to average 31 cents an hour more—and increases of about 35 cents an hour in addition for yard and operating employes.

D. C. May Handle 6 Million Letters Today

Washington Postmaster Roy M. North said yesterday he expects the mail volume here to reach its Christmas peak—perhaps six million letters a day—today or Wednesday.

Meanwhile, postal officials said the mail embargo logjam in the Washington rail yards has been cleared, and the yards are now handling "current" mail shipments.

U. S. Suffers Setback In Rail Contempt Case

CHICAGO, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Government suffered an apparent setback today in its effort to press contempt of court charges in connection with last week's crippling strike of railroad yard workers.

Walter N. Murray, attorney for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen told Federal Judge Michael L. Igoe today that a restraining order issued Wednesday by Federal Judge William J. Campbell was not served on 54 of the union's 56 officers until Saturday. The walkout ended that day.

Judge Igoe suggested that Murray confer with Government prosecutors on whether the 54 officers should be dismissed from the case.

The hearing was continued to Thursday, when Murray will present a written motion for dismissal of the officers.

Murray said he will prove on Thursday that the two vice presidents served with notices of the restraining order—vice presidents Samuel Vander Hei and F. W. Coyle—are innocent of contempt. The union also has been named in the contempt citation.

Orville Crouch Gets M-G-M Post

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: Orville Crouch succeeds to the twin top posts held by the late Carter Barron . . . Yesterday this soft-spoken young fellow was appointed Eastern Division manager of Loew's Theaters and Washington representative of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer . . . He's a familiar figure about town, having been Carter's assistant for the past year, a job he held in 1947, before taking a year's turn at Loew's top spot in the Cleveland division . . . In his late thirties, Crouch has been with Loew's for 20 years, having started as a student assistant manager in Akron, Ohio, in his late teens . . . He's got that prematurely gray hair over a young face which typifies the men of distinction set; he and wife Cathryn live over in Arlington . . . His rise from the lowly rungs to this top post of the Nick Scheneck organization typifies a policy the company's proud of: up from the ranks . . . There are numerous other key Loew figures who've made much the same progress in a generation . . . Both Metro and his business associates can rejoice that Crouch had the chance to serve under Carter Barron; a more inspiring example to follow would be impossible to find.

MARIE POWERS has not been using her skates here—at least not yet . . . The blonde star of "The Consul" doesn't mind being described as "buxom" and she's as cheerful, colorful and vita'ity-chocked as the grandmother she sings is of necessity the opposite . . . Marie is noted in Gotham for her skating, which she does both on-the-round and on-the-rink, a hobby she finds helpful to sane living: "Honest to John, when you're busy keeping yourself up on skates, you haven't the time to worry about world situations. Yes, I took my skates to Italy for the filming of 'The Medium,' but do you know, we worked 17 hours a day and I didn't get on those skates on e. I flew back, joined the play in Boston, and I've been on the go ever since" . . . The Powers life is a great, colorful yarn . . . After an operatic career in Europe, during which she sang 52 roles, including Wagnerian roles under Toscanini, she came back to her native America at the start of World War II, broke and disconsolate at the death of her husband, Italy's Luigi Crescenti, but her battle back to the top in the Menotti operas and her buoyant spirits have endeared her to all . . . At patriotic gatherings she always sings "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and it's just the song for this vibrant, otional woman.

VERA MOWRY, of Arena Stage, says that that king-sized chair in "Alice in Wonderland" will bear 500 pounds, that it can be collapsed into a few slats of board for quick transportation; more on "Alice" tomorrow . . . Vincent Iorio is saying goodby to his "Macbeth" castle tomorrow; the Trans-Lux new one is "Prelude to Fame," opening Thursday . . . Edith Mirick's "Thief of Heaven" received an honorable mention for verse plays in the Dramatists' Alliance sixteenth annual competition; there'll be a new contest for this Stanford University event due March 25 . . . Add Children's Events: "Hansel and Gretel" performed by the National Symphony and the Washington School of the Ballet at Constitution Hall Friday afternoon the 29th.

MARK ROLLINS sends regards to his Washington friends; he's now in Beverly Hills with his brother Jack, writing for Hill & Range Songs, Inc.; Jack's the boy who wrote "Peter Cottontail" and "Frosty the Snowman" . . . Barry Hyams, the Hurok man and son-in-law of the mighty Sol, is leaving that office after 14 years and will ally himself with Whitehead Productions, whose current hit is "The Member of th eWedding" . . . June Allyson, claims Boxoffice, the mag, has nosed out Bing Crosby as the Nation's favorite film star; Bing's second, with Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Betty Grable, Gary Cooper, Bob Hope, Loretta Young, Spencer Tracy, Esther Williams, Olivia de Havilland and Jane Wyman on the top 10 list.

OLIVIA DE HAVILLAND'S name on that list must make her smile, for she's just been picked by the Hollywood Press Club as the year's "least cooperative" picture star, because, says this hoity-toity bunch, "Olivia won't talk at all." . . . Poor Robert Mitchum's on their bum's list, along with Lana Turner, Jane Wyman and Gordon MacRae, all of whom would certainly get A's from the Washington press set, if that's any consolation to 'em . . . Winners of this "Golden Apple" deal were Loretta Young and Alan Ladd.

SAM JAFFE stars in "Flight to Freedom," the United Palestine Appeal film which will be shown December 27 at the Jewish Community Center . . . Helen Hamer has what seems a logical beef about side seats in the Gayety's second balcony . . . Lisa Gardiner points out that dancers make wonderful auto drivers; on a recent trip back from Front Royal in stormy weather, the ballet mistress observed that in a caravan of drivers, dancers at the wheels never stalled, always coordinated exceptionally with the machines at their command.

BARBARA COLE, speaking of dancers, will find her picture in the newly published "Victory Book of the Ballet"; the Arena stage lady at the time of the shot was with Ballet Theater in London . . . . Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap: Yes, as I wrote, even the ad picked up a typographical error and I was more angry than you were surprised . . . Scott Kirkpatrick, long the town's "live" theater p. m. (at both the Old National and the New Gayety) checks out to do promotion for the returned Ballet Theater . . . . Joan Blondell will be the first star for Baltimore's new Arena Theater, which will open up at the Sheraton-Belvedere January 8 with "Happy Birthday." . . . Speaking of which, its original star, Helen Hayes, is set to make a Paramount picture in March, with Leo McCarey as writer-producer . . . . Only one more day for you to see "King Solomon's Mines" at the Palace . . . . Walt Disney's "Beaver Valley" will share the National screen with "All About Eve" Christmas week . . . . The Honeywell Foundation's annual Christmas entertainment this year will be a novelty, a British pantomime of "Cinderella," to be acted Thursday afternoon at 2 in the Hiser-Bethesda Theater for the benefit of the Suburban Hospital.

NEW CHIEF: Orville Crouch, who yesterday was appointed Eastern Division Manager of Loew's Theaters and Washington representative of M-G-M, succeeding the late Carter T. Barron

Church Soloist Is Shot Dead as Burglary Suspect

SAN DIEGO, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Professional singer George Decker, who sang the baritone solo in a Christmas cantata at a San Diego church yesterday morning, was shot and killed as a burglary suspect last night.

Detectives Paul Walk and Dave Sickels spotted the handsome, 30-year-old singer entering a doctor's office last night. The officers followed Decker, who slammed and locked the door in their faces.

The two officers tried to smash in the door and then Walk fired through it at about arm-pit height. The bullet from Walk's .38-caliber police revolver entered Decker's neck below the throat, glanced off the collarbone and lodged near a rib. He died several hours later.

Police said Decker was under five-year probation from a San Diego conviction in February in a wave of school burglaries.

Younger Bergdoll Confesses Guilt Of Draft-Dodging

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Alfred Bergdoll pleaded guilty today to dodging the draft, the charge that caused his father to spend 19 years in exile in Germany and almost five years in jail when he finally came home.

The 23-year-old son of World War I's most notorious draft-dodger faces a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each of two counts. Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan set Thursday for sentencing.

Attorney Herman Alderstein, who said he had been hired by three of young Bergdoll's friends, told the court the youth was willing "to enter limited noncombat service."

"That is something he is not going to negotiate with me now," Judge Ryan said. "It's a matter for him to take up with the Selective Service Administration."

Boy, 8, Sends 40 Cents For Wounded in Korea

HOLDEN, Mass., Dec. 18 (AP).—Fred Borger, 8, is sharing his Christmas this year with GIs wounded in Korea and he has a letter from General MacArthur's adjutant to prove it.

Fred saved 40 cents from his allowance and sent it off—a quarter, a dime and a nickel—glued to a piece of cardboard, to General MacArthur, stipulating that it be used only for the wounded. He has received MacArthur's thanks through Brig. Gen. K. B. Bush, and with it a receipt from the American Red Cross in Tokyo.

Bootleg Ring In Penicillin Uncovered

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 18 (AP).—Richmond's City Health Director said today a "bootleg ring" is peddling penicillin in a Negro section of the city either for home treatment or the prevention of venereal disease.

The existence of the "bootleg ring" has been known for several days, Dr. E. M. Holmes, jr., said. He added that all hospitals and drug firms in the area with large supplies have been alerted.

Dr. Holmes said neither his department nor Richmond police knew how many persons are involved in the illicit ring or what source of supply is being tapped. He said he suspected that drug is coming from a big dispenser—such as a large hospital or drug firm.

Dr. Holmes warned the public that the use of penicillin without a physician's direction and observation is exceedingly dangerous and can prove fatal.

The ring operates in a fashion similar to any other bootlegging organization, Dr. Holmes said. Persons nterested in getting a supply of the drug are referred to a certain address where they can buy it, he said.

Penicillin is being sold by the bootleggers either in tablet form or in cartridges suitable for injection by syringe, Dr. Holmes said. He said the tablets are being sold at four for $1. He did not know the price of the cartridges.

Pushtoonistan Creation Urged As Pathan Nation

NEW DELHI, India, Dec 18 (AP). Delegates from a disputed tribal border area between Afghanistan and Pakistan called on the United Nations yesterday to make the region a new nation—Pushtoonistan.

The territory, some 10,000 square miles along Pakistan's northwest border, has been the scene of border clashes in the last few months.

A conference of nearly 100 delegates from distant parts of India, Pakistan and Afghanistan began a two-day conference on the future of the tense area yesterday. They said the continued discontent of the 8,000,000 Pathan tribesmen from Gilgit to Baluchistan presents a serious threat to the peace and security of Asia.

The delegates contended that Pakistan is keeping 12,000 Pathans as prisoners and charged Pakistan authorities with "atrocities" in an attempt to suppress an independence movement.

Farr Forfeits $53.50 In Obscene Song Case

Frankie Farr, 47, comedian at the Hilltop Restaurant, 5211 Marlboro rd., Coral Hills, Md., yesterday forfeited $53.50 collateral at Marlboro Police Court on charges that he sang obscene songs during his act on December 2.

Farr was arrested by Prince Georges County Police Lieut. E. A. Turner in the middle of his performance after Turner had watched part of the show. When Farr failed to appear at court yesterday Judge Alan Bowie ordered the collateral forfeited.

Europe's Coal Deficit Put at 6 Million Tons

GENEVA, Switzerland, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The United Nations Economic Commission for Europe announced today that Europe faces a deficit of six million tons of coal and coke in the first three months of 1951.

Rearmament programs and increased stockpiling have completely wiped out a surplus of three million tons that existed earlier this year.

Choral Groups Give Annual Rendition of 'The Messiah'

By Paul Hume

Another sign of the imminence of Christmas came to Constitution Hall last night.

The Washington and Cathedral Choral Societies sang Handel's Messiah, as is their annual custom. With members of the National Symphony Orchestra, they were directed by Paul Callaway. Richard Dirksen was the organist.

Soloists were Ruth Diehl, soprano, Irene Watson, contralto, Harold Haugh, tenor, and Edwin Steffe, bass. Haugh has now sung the famous tenor part here for the past five years. We have never heard him sing it with more warmth of feeling, excellent technique, and vocal expressiveness than was his last night.

D. C. Native

Steffe, a native of Washington who is now earning a fine name as one of the country's busiest singers, gave the best account of the bass part we have heard in Washington. His resonant voice handled the big moments easily, and he showed a flexibility of equal worth. Moreover, he gave his text with a sympathetic inflection often missing.

Ruth Diehl has often sung in Washington, both with the choral societies and the National Symphony. This was her first Messiah here. Her voice is suited to the music and her manner moves the heart as well as the ear. If she made even greater use of her soft voice she would add to the winning sound of her "Come Unto Him."

Irene Watson owns a sumptuous contralto voice which she rarely lets speak freely in her behalf. The tone is rich yet so hampered, that it comes out with a thick sound that muffles both word and line. This is a pity because she has the means of being a fine singer. As it was, her music was lifeless most of the time.

Lacked Fire

The chorus sang in its best vein. That is fortunate when Messiah is being given, for the chorus is the heroic stuff of this oratorio. Yet the work as a whole lacked the fire and power it had last year. There were moments when shortness of rehearsal showed in the orchestra, though they often played well.

Above all, the lack of any firmly fixed style in recitatives from soloists and accompaniment alike, gave the work a less than authoritative sound. If Messiah is to be given each year, it should be studied afresh, and everyone in the performance should approach it from the same musical point of view.

For those who did not hear last night's performance and want to enjoy this immortal music, there will be performances by the Air Force Orchestra, chorus, and soloists tonight and Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock, in Lisner Auditorium. Admission is free.

Total Non-Russian Reds Reported as 18 Million

PRAGUE, Dec. 18 (AP). — The Cominform weekly bulletin today said there are 18 million Communists in the world outside the Soviet Union. (The Soviet Communist Party is reported to have about six million members, out of a population of about 200 million.)

The bulletin said Communist parties in some capitalist countries were guilty of "shortcomings."

Double Proof

that Dollar for Dollar

you can't beat a Pontiac!

① A look at the Car proves its Quality

② A look at the Price proves its Value!

In the short time since it was presented, thousands of people have flocked to see the great new Silver Anniversary Pontiac—few cars have ever had a reception to equal this. Most people came to admire, which is natural enough. But a great many people do more than admire, they start figuring—they begin to compare this wonderfully beautiful and desirable car with the modest price tag it bears. The conclusion is obvious—no car, at any price, offers more for every new car dollar you invest than a great new Pontiac! Drop in any time and look at the car—then look at the price—you'll be doubly sure that dollar for dollar, you can't beat a Pontiac!

A. U. Out to Upset Hoyas Tonight

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SOMEHOW, SOMEWHERE a team named the Cleveland Browns got hold of a football and used it to excellent advantage. In fact, they developed such proficiency with it they wound up as champions of their division in the toughest football league in the land, and next week will play the Los Angeles Rams for the over-all title.

Whether the Browns bought the football they used, or slung it together from carcasses of little pigs that were ploughed under, is irrelevant. It fit all the NFL specifications as to size, shape and weight and proved a better weapon in the hands of the Browns than with any other team.

POVICH

I dwell on the fact that the Browns obviously had a football to play with because Mr. Elmer Layden, then the high commissioner of the NFL, cast some doubt back in 1945 of their ability to come by one. That was when the All-American Conference, of which the Browns were a member, proposed to set up a pro league in competition with the NFL.

Mr. Layden brushed off the whole idea that there could be another pro league, never raising his glance from its perusal down the length of his nose as he pooh-poohed the organizational efforts of the new league. Then it was that he said for posterity, "They haven't even got a football."

WHEN THE AAC did somehow manage to acquire not only one football but enough to start a whole new league, and the Browns began to establish the fact that they were a pretty fair country sort of football team, another NFL source was heard from. Mr. George Marshall got into the act by wondering out loud if the AAC champions could beat any team in the NFL.

The Browns, in their first year in the NFL, resolved Marshall's doubt quickly. They didn't beat his Redskins right away because the two clubs weren't scheduled until mid-season, but when the time came, the Browns beat Marshall's Redskins twice. They also beat the defendng NFL champions, the Eagles, a couple of times and in 13 games lost only to the Giants, twice.

The victory on Sunday that brought them the divisional title was the mark of a great football team. They beat the Giants by forcing them to settle for a field goal after the New Yorkers had achieved a first down on the three-yard line. At a time when a touchdown would have licked the Browns, they threw the Giants back.

THE NEXT TEST for the Browns is the championship play-off on Sunday with the Los Angeles Rams at Cleveland, and the vengeance of the old AAC would be complete if their Browns took it all. The Los Angeles Rams are the original Cleveland Rams who pulled out of that latter city and took it off the pro football map until the Browns moved in.

The Rams were slapping down the Chicago Bears for their divisional title while the Browns were outscoring the Giants. It was defeat for the running teams, the Bears and Giants, against the passing teams, the Rams and Browns although paradoxically the Browns used Lou Groza's kicking toe to win the biggest game of their history.

Sunday's will be the battle of the forward-passing giants, Bob Waterfield of the Rams and Otto Graham of the Browns who came along to fill the place in their hearts that Cleveland fans formerly had reserved for Waterfield. It will pit the best attacking team in the pro league, the Rams, against the team that lost the defensive title to the Eagles by six mere points.

THE THOUSANDS in Cleveland Stadium on Sunday will be focusing, no doubt, on the maneuvering of Waterfield and Graham, but the two football teams won't necessarily be doing the same. When on defense, their chief concern will not be the passing quarterback. They'll be a heap more interested in what the ends are doing because this contest sets off Mr. Tom Fears against the Messrs. Dante Lavelli and Mac Speedie.

Lavelli and Speedie are the magnificent fakers who have been snagging Graham's passes for three years against the concentrated defenses arrayed against them. And Fears is the elusive fellow who last year topped the league in passes caught and then made his fame stick this year by repeating that feat.

Waterfield threw three touchdown passes to beat the Bears, and in the fashion of the times got top billing for the victory, but the man on the other end on each occasion was Fears who went all the way from distances ranging from 23 to 68 yards. My hero was Fears, and I think I will start a new school of football reporting that will credit pass-catchers with being a big help to the man who throws the ball.

Maryland Tops W.&L., 52-43, for 3d in Row

By Gordon Beard

The University of Maryland's basketball team scored its third consecutive victory and fourth win in five collegiate starts by defeating Washington and Lee at College Park last night, 52-43.

Leading 18-15 after a slightly dead first half, during which both squads played possession ball and attempted few shots, the Terps uncovered their shooting eyes in the second half and pulled away for a Southern Conference triumph.

Captain Lee Brawley again paced the home team with 19 points and raised his seasonal total to 87, but he finished second to the Generals' Jay Handlan for top honors.

Handlan, the only W&L player to sink more one field goal, hit seven baskets from the floor and 14 of 16 foul tosses for 28 points. Brawley was equally effective at the foul line, making 9 out of 10.

With Brawley sinking 10 points and Teammate Diek Koffenberger five, Maryland increased its advantage to 37-26 midway the second half. Then Coach Bud Millikan began inserting his subs.

The triumph was Maryland's second straight in Southern Conference play and the third consecutive league loss for the Generals, who have won two and lost five in over-all competition.

In a preliminary game, Lew Gigante tallied 23 points to lead Georgetown's undefeated frosh team to a 48-37 victory over the Maryland freshmen. It was the Hoyas' fourth consecutive triumph and broke the little Terps' three-game winning streak.

N. C. State Edges Michigan in Overtime

RALEIGH, N. C., Dec. 18 (AP).—North Carolina State College's basketball team remained undefeated tonight by whipping Michigan, 65-62, in a rough, nip and tuck game that required an overtime period.

The regular game ended at 58-all after the score had been tied nine times.

Sammy Ranzino, N. C. State's dazzling forward, put the Wolfpack out front to stay in the overtime play with a quick three points. Ranzino swished in 27 points to be high scorer. Michigan Center Leo Vanderkey led the losers with 22 points.

Motley Would Play Defense

Tony Adamle, Young May Miss Browns' Title Game With Rams

CLEVELAND, Dec. 18 (AP).—Two of the Cleveland Browns turned up today with injuries that may keep them out of next Sunday's National Football League title game here against the Los Angeles Rams.

Fullback Tony Adamle, captain and left side linebacker, suffered a sprained ankle and Left End George Young incurred a slight rib separation in the Browns' 8-3 victory over the New York Giants.

Dr. Vic Ippolito, club physician, listed both as "doubtful starters."

HALFBACK Dub Jones and Tackle John Kissell got elbow bruises from jolting spills on the frozen Municipal Stadium turf, which Coach Paul Brown described as "that concrete."

Chances are Brown will assign Fullback Marion Motley to the defensive chores and use Emerson Cole, a Toledo rookie, as offensive fullback.

The other Brownies who missed yesterday's action with injuries are expected to be fit for the championship contest. They are Halfback Don (Dopey) Phelps, a break-away and kick-return specialis, who had a shoulder injury, and Guard Alex Agase, whose sprained ankle is mending.

Los Angeles Appears in Top Shape

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams will go into next Sunday's pro championship clash with the Cleveland Browns at Cleveland in good shape, it appeared today.

Most important, there's nothing wrong with Bob Waterfield's passing arm or Tom Fears' clutching fingers. The combination scored three touchdowns Sunday to carry the Rams to the division title in a 24-14 victory over the Chicago Bears.

IN FACT, the Rams came out of the bruising contest with the Bears with little more than bruises. Tank Younger seems to be the most doubtful starter. The big Negro suffered a shoulder injury.

Despite the Rams' good condition, however, the betting locally favors Cleveland. The Browns' strong defense, plus the prospect of snow and cold, installed the Easterners as seven-point favorites in the spring street marts today. Strong local support drove the margin down to 3½ points later in the day.

Northwest Skiers Potential Guerillas

SEATTLE, Dec. 18 (AP).—Pacific northwest skiers have started a movement to organize 5000 slat-riders in this region as a potential mountain guerilla force in case of invasion by an enemy.

Plans call for training the skiers to guard mountain passes, hydro-electric projects, domestic water supplies, power lines and communication systems as well as carry on guerilla warfare.

The plan, still in its drawing-board stages, has been submitted to Federal Civil Defense Authorities for approval.

Keene Scores TKO Without Hard Punch

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Julian Keene, District light-heavyweight champion, won a fight last night without striking a blow hard enough to floor a flyweight.

Keene scored a technical knockout over LeRoy Coleman of Paterson, N. J., at Turner's Arena before 653 spectators when Coleman was unable to answer the bell for the sixth round.

Keene, weighing 175, repeatedly speared Coleman throughout the fight with flicking lefts which were rapidly closing the New Jersey boy's already badly battered eyes. In the fifth, Keene hooked a left under Coleman's right ear which landed on a "muscular gland."

The blow apparently paralyzed Coleman's neck muscles. At any rate, he was unable to move his head and Dr. David Gordon of the District Boxing Commission stopped the fight.

Coleman weighed in at 161. His handlers claimed that he suffered a broken nose and Dr. Gordon sent him to Garfield Hospital for X-rays. If he did, he must have had it before he came, in the opinion of this observer, for no punch Keene threw seemed capable of inflicting such havoc.

Last night's fight card was the last to be televised. The contract between Station WMAL-TV and Turner's expires with the end of the year and will not be renewed, Promoter Gabe Menendez said.

The semifinal between Rufus Berry and Harvey Jones was declared a draw by the officials. Berry floored Jones for a five count with a looping right in the final round but an unintential blow to Jones' groin in the fourth halted the fight for about five minutes and cost Berry heavily in the scoring.

In the preliminaries, Bobby Bowen won a unanimous decision over Welterweight Billy Hickerson in four rounds. Sandy McPherson scored a TKO over Welterweight Vic Creelman when Creelman could not answer the bell for the third round due to a badly cut right eye. Featherweight Oat Thomas beat Walt Demind, winning a unanimous decision in five rounds.

Redskins May Drop Moore, Reed

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

As a forerunner to what may be in store for Herman Ball, whose fate probably will be determined this week, the Redskins are expected to announce momentarily that the contracts of Backfield Coach Wilbur Moore and Line Coach Max Reed will not be renewed.

A Redskin official who was instrumental in hiring Ball's two assistants said last night: "Their contracts have not been renewed and it is extremely doubtful if they will be."

Moore, former halfback star for Minnesota and the Redskins, became backfield cocah in 1947 after playing for the Redskins for six years. His contract does not expire until December 31.

Reed's contract expired December 10, the date Redskins ended worst season in their history by losing to Cleveland's championship Browns, 45-21. He joined the local pros this year, leaving the University of Maryland staff.

Ball, meanwhile, has been huddling with Redskins' president George Marshall for the past several days trying to find out his future.

Last night Ball said: "We ought to reach a decision this week. So far, there's nothing new."

Last week Marshall said he was toying with the idea of asking the Redskins season ticket holders to help him decide if Ball should be retained as head coach. Apparently, Marshall is about ready to make the decision without suggestions from his ticket-holders.

Ball, one of the most popular coaches in Redskins' history and believed by many to be their best coach since Ray Flaherty, concluded his first full year as head man this season.

G. W. Plays W. & L. in Other Game At Uline's

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Tonight's one night American University's good sports can't wish Georgetown any luck at all—unless it's all bad.

Coach Staff Cassell's Eagles meet the Hoyas in the feature game of the season's first collegiate basketball double-header in Uline Arena. In the opener, at 8 p.m., George Washington takes on Washington and Lee in a Southern Conference test.

Right before Georgetown met Long Island U. in Madison Square Garden last Thursday, the team received a wire wishing it luck from Captain Roy Ishman and the A. U. squad.

It was a nice gesture, appreciated all around, but tonight both teams know they'll have to be fierce opponents.

Cassell Optimistic

Cassell feels that his Mason-Dixon Conference champs are underrated. He's frankly optimistic about the outcome. American has rolled up 357 points in posting four victories in five starts. Not included is its 85-35 rout of the Alumni. The only loss was to Penn State, 66-63.

Ishman, top scorer with 92 points for an 18.4 average, leads a veteran team that has height and savvy. Its tricky zone defense, too, is calculated to give Georgetown's classy sophs trouble.

Ishman is 6-4; Sherwood Webster, runnerup with 90 points, 6-5, and Center Ronnie Garshag, 6-6, Ed Moffatt, 6-2, and Art Morales, 6-1, round out the starting quintet.

These five men have scored all but 34 of the team's points and will have to carry the burden tonight. Freshman Charley Bear, 6-4, and Bud Daly, 5-10, are the only reserves who have been particularly helpful.

Georgetown is the only member of the local "Big Three" scheduling the eager Eagles. A. U. showed its appreciation last year by nearly knocking off the Hoyas, losing a 68-63 decision in the last two minutes.

Hoya Coach Buddy O'Grady has feared A. U. most among his first five opponents this season—even more than the Long Island team that dealt Georgetown its first setback, 75-66, last week.

Worrisome O'Grady still feels the same way. He said last night, "I know A. U. will be tremendously up for the game. It was last year and was, I thought, one of the best teams we played."

Barry Sullivan, who had a sensational 25-point night against LIU, goes into the game Georgetown's leading scorer with 68 points; Bill Bolger has 61 and Bob Makatura 42.

G. W. Hopes to Rebound

Bill Reinhart's disappointing GW club hopes to hit its stride tonight against W. & L. After losses to N. C. State and Temple, the Colonials won over Richmond and Virginia but neither victory was impressive.

Elsewhere tonight, Maryland entertains Rutgers and Catholic University journeys to Philadelphia to meet St. Joseph's Montgomery Junior College entertains Army Medical Center.

Culmone Must Win Quickly

MIAMI, Fla. Dec. 18 (AP).—Time was running out on Jockey Joe Culmone today in his drive to break the all-time riding record set by Walter Miller in 1906.

Culmone needs 18 more winners to tie Miller's record of 388. The slender little Sicilian jockey sent word to Tropical Park race track in mid-morning that he was staying in bed because "I'm not feeling so good."

Only 11 racing days are left in the year and Culmone must average better than three winners every two days to break the 44-year-old record.

$100,000 for '51? Stan Musial Hasn't Asked for It—Yet

DONORA, Pa., Dec. 18 (AP).—Has Stan Musial asked the St. Louis Cardinals $100,000 to play baseball for them next year?

Stan says "No."

Is he going to ask $100,000? Stan isn't sure, but he might, though not likely.

Musial, the National League batting champion in 1950, winner of the crown for the fourth time, is here for a visit in the town of his birth.

"I think I am entitled to a substantial raise and I'm going to try to get it," said Outfielder Stan.

Ike Williams Decisions Cruz

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 18 (AP).—Lightweight Champion Ike Williams, 144, Trenton, N. J., won a unanimous decision tonight as he pounded Rudy Cruz, 138, Los Angeles, with ease in a 10-round non-title bout at the Arena.

A crowd of 3618 paid $9908 to see the Williams-Cruz feature and also to witness the first comeback appearance of young Harold Johnson. Johnson, who was forced to retire because of a bad back after being knocked out by Jersey Joe Walcott last February, stopped Harry Daniels, 170, N. Y., in 2:04 of the second round. Both weighed 170.

But Wes Won't Reconsider

Four Ohio State Professors Launch 'Keep Fesler' Drive

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 18 (AP).—Four Ohio State University professors launched a campaign today to "Keep Wes Fesler" as football coach. But Fesler said that, while he appreciated the move, he wouldn't take back his resignation.

The professors drafted a petition and placed it in the Faculty Club for signatures by faculty members.

The petition, addressed to University President Howard L. Bevis, expressed confidence in Fesler and urges him to reconsider his resignation. Fesler, who coached the last Rose Bowl champs and won six of nine this season, plans to enter private business.

Drafted by Profs. William H. Hildreth, Roy H. Pearce, Richard Armitage and Glenn Leggett, the petition reads:

"We, the undersigned members of the faculty, wish to express our respect for and complete confidence in Wesley Fesler as football coach and as a colleague, and record our hope that he reconsider his decision to leave the university.

"We are aware of the difficulties in both his and the university's position, and we are particularly mindful of the inordinate pressure being exerted on both him and the university by parties which do not have the total interest of the university at heart.

"We are especially fearful that Fesler may be replaced by one who will not have his understanding of the conduct and purpose of amateur sports in an institution like ours.

"Let us not have a coach whose purpose is to win at any cost. We hope that Fesler, knowing the feelings of his colleagues in this matter, will decide to remain in a job for which he is remarkbaly well fitted."

No successor to Fesler has been named.

Bob Williams Says He'll Play Pro Football

BALTIMORE, Dec. 18 (AP).—Bob Williams, Notre Dame's All-America back, said today he would like to play professional football unless he gets a good offer to do radio broadcasting.

Williams, a native Baltimorean, said "Sure I would like to play with the pros if the offer is good. If I got a radio broadcasting offer right away that indicated a good future, I might not play."

He added he's had only "feelers" from radio.

Williams said it "makes little difference" which club he would play with. The Baltimore Colts are due to have first choice in the National Football League next year for having lost the most games this season.

A 'Negligible' Amount

Ted Collins Drops Less Than $100,000 On Football Yanks, Calls That Success

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The pro football season was a rip-roaring financial success for Owner Ted Collins of the New York Yanks. He lost less than $100,000 for a change.

Ted Collins

"Just say our losses were negligible," said the ever-optimistic radio producer who already has dropped a million or so among the pros.

What Collins regards as negligible after blowing nearly $300,000 in 1949 is hard to figure, although some who know him best figure it to be about $50,000 or $60,000 in the red for 1950.

To Ted that's virtually rolling in clover after six previous seasons of financial disaster, and chances are he's about through being pro football's patsy.

"I've got to have better dates and I want a home-and-home series with the New York Giants," said Collins, who never asked anything before but, "How much will it cost me to play with you fellows?"

"We played two Friday night games, one on Thursday night, and had only three Sunday dates," said Collins.

Ted is prepared to fight hard for something better than the leftovers from the long-established Giants, who rule the roost in the Big Town.

"Sure, we're going to keep the Yanks in New York," he said. "We won't be moving out to any other city."

Despite the poor dates, in which the early-season night games happened to conflict badly with the terrific baseball pennant races, the Yanks drew four times as many patrons as did Ted's Bulldogs in 1949. Sounds good, except the Bulldogs drew exactly 28,676 total paid admissions for a six-game schedule.

"The Yanks drew 111,232 in six games at home this year," he said. "We did better than Baltimore and drew only 79 fewer than the Green Bay Packers."

As a road club the slick Yanks were second only to Cleveland's Browns as a boxoffice draw, en route to a record that wound up with seven victories and five defeats. Cleveland, then the Yanks, Los Angeles Rams, Chicago Bears and Chicago Cards topped the road clubs.

Collins apparently is set to retain Coach Red Strader. At least he said:

"I think Strader is the greatest coach in pro football."

Red is a dandy, all right. He was noted as a defensive coach with the All-America Conference Yankees, but when the changeover was made into the new league, and the Yanks were forced to give up several key defenders, Strader turned the Yanks into strictly an offensive team. In most statistics, the Yanks wound up second only to the Rams offensively.

With a tackle or two and some linebackers, Collins figures he'll be set for 1951 with George Ratterman, Buddy Young, George Taliaferro and Zollie Toth back to wheel the offense.

And maybe make a little money for a change.

Michigan Gets Big Sendoff on Way To Rose Bowl

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Dec. 18 (AP).—Michigan's Wolverines got a rousing send-off to the Rose Bowl today.

The 44-player squad was cheered on to its January 1 classic with California by an estimated 2500 at a pep rally at the Michigan Union. Another 200 well-wishers were at the station as they entrained on a special section of the Sante Fe.

Chisox Won't Change Chandler Vote, Young Comiskey Declares

Mother OKs His Decision, He Reports

CHICAGO, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Comiskey clan won't switch the vote youthful Chuck Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox presumably cast against rehiring A. B. Chandler as commissioner of baseball.

Comiskey, 24, who returned from St. Petersburg, Fla., today, said he conferred immediately with his mother, Mrs. Grace R. Comiskey, club president, over the reported discrepancy on the way the White Sox felt about Chandler's surprise firing.

Mrs. Comiskey last weekend was credited with saying the White Sox would back Chandler in any new ballot on the subject. Charles was believed to have joined the anti Chandler faction in the voting at St. Petersburg. About the family chat, vice president Comiskey said:

"I told her how I voted and I gave my reasons. Mother agreed I had done the right thing and my vote stands as is. I have told nobody else, not even Frank Lane (Sox general manager), how I voted."

"Mother did not understand that the matter of Chandler's contract was something that had to be determined at the meeting in St. Petersburg," Comiskey continued. "I understand some people had told her I had voted against Chandler. I don't see how anybody could have known. It was a secret ballot and not even the other owners in the room knew how I voted and I didn't know how they voted.

"I heard no one proclaim he had voted either for or against Chandler, though I understand one or two owners have indicated their feelings in the matter. I have said before and I say again that the discussions about Chandler in the meeting were frank and the arguments solid."

Some Chicago baseball writers reasoned, however, that if Comiskey voted for Chandler's retention, he would have been quick to say so in the face of the hubbub that followed the surprise ballot.

Mrs. Comiskey could not be reached immediately after her conference with Charles.

The widow of the late J. Louis Comiskey, son of the Sox founder, said last Saturday the Chandler matter was "crudely handled" and without "any advance knowledge by me. I did not approve of it from the moment I heard of what had taken place. I hadn't been consulted so didn't even know that such a move was afoot."

'Old Reliable' Through at 34

Henrich Ends His Career Because of Knee Injury; Remains With Yankees as Coach

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Tommy Henrich, a member of the New York Yankees since 1937 and one of the game's most feared batsmen, decided to hang up his glove rather than play on an injured knee. He accepted a job on the coaching staff of the World Champions.

Tom Henrich

Tommy, known as "Old Reliable" for his timely hitting and slick play in right field and at first base, played very little the past season and was taken off the eligible list for the World Series between the Yanks and the Phillies.

The knee, injured in the Spring, pained him severely each time he had to make a quick turn or stop. Surgeons gave him only half-hope that an operation would effect any real improvement. So, at 34, the old Massillon (Ohio) boy has chosen to call it a career. He will be the fourth man on Manager Casey Stengel's coaching staff.

Had he wished, Henrich could have had the job of managing the Yankees' Kansas City club in the American Association. He preferred, first, to learn all he could about managing at the feet of Stengel.

One of the game's most popular players, Henrich has long been regarded as prime managerial material. He was sought, also, as a baseball broadcaster in recent months when it became known he probably would not try to play next season.

Although he never shone with quite the magnitude of his outfield teamate, Joe DiMaggio, Henrich has been an important cog in every Yankee pennant winner since 1938. He received a $25,000 bonus for signing with the Yanks after Commissioner Landis took him away from Cleveland in '37 and declared him a free agent.

His highest batting mark in a full season with the Yanks was .308 in 1948, but he clouted .307 in another year and always was good for a solid .280 or thereabouts, with plenty of extra bases thrown in. No opposing pitcher liked to see him up there with men on base.

Tommy's best home run output was in 1941, when he stroked 31, but there were other years in which he blasted 25, 24, 22 and 19. His best-remembered four-bagger probably will be the ninth-inning smash which beat Brooklyn, 1-0, in the opening game of the '49 World Series.

In four World Series, '38 through '49, he hit for an average of .262. Included among his 22 hits were four home runs and four doubles. He handled 74 chances in World Series play and committed one error. He played in three All-Star games.

Kentucky Voted Top Court Team

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Unbeaten Kentucky, a stunning 68-39 winner over Kansas is the No. 1 college basketball team in the Nation, according to the first Associated Press poll of the season.

Five straight wins convinced 93 of 165 voting sports writers and sportscasters that Coach Adolph Rupp's unbeaten Wildcats are tops at this stage of the campaign. Their point total of 1451 was some 150 better than runnerup Bradley, last year's regular season poll winner.

Bradley and North Carolina State, winners of six straight through Saturday's games, each received 20 first place votes. Bradley took second position on points, 1302 to 1105.

'Sick and Tired of It'

McKinney Accuses Caps Of Loafing, Cracks Whip

Coach Bones McKinney of the Washington Caps, burned to a crisp over the locals' sloppy play in last Saturday's 96-88 loss to the Philadelphia Warriors, began cracking the whip over his team yesterday.

At a practice session at Uline Arena the usually genial Bones accused his team of loafing.

"We've been losing games because of bad passing, a complete lack of defense and miserable rebounding," he said. "I'm sick and tired of it."

"Hereafter when any player, regardless of reputation, makes an inexecusable mistake in judgment, he's coming out of the game. You men are being paid good money to do a good job, and I won't settle for anything less!"

After the spade-calling session, McKinney ran the Caps through a brisk workout and pronounced himself convinced that tomorrow's game against the Rochester Royals will find the team sharper.

The Royals have won three straight games from Washington this season and 11 straight since the 1948-1949 season. They are favored to make the string an even dozen in tomorrow's clash.

The last time the Royals were here, November 29, they defeated the Caps, 72-71, in the fastest finish ever seen on a local court. Rochester scored four points in the final three seconds. McKinney protested that both baskets were made after the final horn went off but he was overruled by the officials.

Latest McKinney Is No Future Cap

Bones McKinney, coach of the Washington Capitols, is a father for the fourth time.

Mrs. Edna McKinney presented Bones with an 8-pound, 4-ounce baby girl late Sunday night, and mother and child were doing well at Sibley Hospital yesterday.

The McKinneys reside in Alexandria, and their other children are Horace "Abbott," Jr., 8; Kay, 3½ and Kitty 2 years.

Love Lock Wins at Charles Town, Nearing Track Record

Bill Bennings

AT CHARLES TOWN.

DEAR FOLKS:

The meeting here has been extended through to December 30 but don't bet this will be the first time the horses have run on Christmas Day. In 1933, the opening of the oval, the session closed December 25, as was the case in 1934, when the start of the meeting was delayed five days on account of a washout of a portion of the track. With Charles Town due to reopen on March 3, this will make a winter layoff of only about eight weeks, the shortest in Eastern racing history. The big exhibition building to the right of the Hagerstown track burned down Sunday night, destroying some of the track offices as well as stored concession equipment owned by H. M. Stevens, Inc. Former Jockey Bobby Merritt was a visitor. He operates a horse farm at Somerville, N. J. See you on the rail. BILL.

Favored Blue Rocket Neck Behind

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Dec. 18.—Performing in near-record time, Love Lock, owned by Dr. W. C. Ensor of Baltimore, won by a neck margin in the West Friendship purse here today.

Defeated by the narrow margin was Blue Rocket, owned by Samuel H. Rogers of Washington, which operated in the role of an odds-on favorite. W. Zakoor's Blue Tailfly was third in the field of six.

Under the handling of Apprentice Robert Gordon, Love Lock was clocked in 1:23 4/5 the fastest seven furlongs run here since the texture of the soil was changed and three fifths of a second over the all-time mark set by Soldirette.

The track was fast and in the best condition of the meeting to date.

Love Lock was second choice in the betting and paid a $7.20 win mutuel. The victory was her eleventh in 32 tries this year and sent her earnings for the year to the $15,000 mark.

Jockey Vernon Bush made a valiant effort to win with Blue Rocket which was going a trifle farther than he appears to fancy. The Maxium colt did the expected and took the top early while Weatherman, under urging, and Love Lock, under restraint, were close up.

Weatherman faltered entering the backstretch and Blue Tailfly moved up with Love Lock. Bush saved ground with Blue Rocket and seemed ready when Love Lock came abreast of the favorite entering the stretch.

Bush went to the whip and Blue Rocket responded to keep going with the challenger almost to the wire, where he began to tire. Young Gordon, holding Love Lock together cleverly, got her to the front in the last couple of jumps. Blue Tailfly was a tired third.

Although the daily double paid $30.40, a rather low return for the meeting, the program generally was another longshot affair. High point was reached in the third race when Southland Farm's Snow Passes led all the way and paid $64.20. The fourth race brought a $55.40 pay-off on F. J. Vollmer's Sun Elsie.

V.M.I. Gives Coach Raise

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 18 (AP).—A proposed new three-year contract for Tom Nugent, head football coach at Virginia Military Institute, was approved today by Maj. Gen. Richard J. Marshall, superintendent of the institute.

The new contract, not yet drafted formally, also includes a raise in pay for Nugent, whose team this year won six games and lost four.

Sanity Code Revision to Be Sought

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Nation's colleges will be asked next month to modify the "sanity code" to permit grants-in-aid, above the regular scholarships, to athletes.

A proposed amendment to the controversial code, which governs financial aid to athletes, is included in a report to members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The NCAA will hold its annual meeting in Dallas January 11-13. Proposed revision of the sanity code is one of the main items of business.

A special committee was appointed to work on overhauling the code after a bitter floor fight developed last January over attempts to suspend seven institutions which failed to conform. The ouster move failed.

The latest proposal would permit special grants for board and meals of needy cases on the condition the NCAA is kept apprised of the aid through itemized accounts.

The institution would have to declare the expenses and financial resources of the athlete. The expenses include such items as room and meals away from home, laundry, etc.

The present code limits aid to tuition and incidental institution fees. It also forbids athletic scholarships to any except needy cases and those of high scholastic ability.

'Champion Baseball' Fan of 1916 Dies at 79

CINCINNATI, Dec. 18 (AP).—Lycurgus McDowell, whose love for baseball caused him to be voted the champion fan of the Nation in 1916, died yesterday. He was 79 years old.

He was believed by local fans to have been the first announcer in a major league park. He used a megaphone in 1920 to advise the fans of the lineups of the Cincinnati Reds and their opponents.

Columbian Prep Fields Its First Sports Team After 41 Years of High Academic Achievement

By Bill Gilbert
Post Reporter

If Columbian Prep's athletic achievements in the next few years approach the school's academic success, it won't be an accident.

Columbian, a school devoted to preparing boys for Annapolis, West Point and the Coast Guard Academies, has a basketball team this year—it's first athletic team in the school's 41-year history.

Headmaster Robert Goulsby says that Prep is the oldest one-year prep school in the country and has averaged 98 percent for admissions to the three academies over the past 20 years.

And, according to Goulsby, nearly every other year the Biltmore st. nw. school comes up with a batting average of 1.000.

Goulsby says he decided to launch the basketball program as an experiment, since he felt the boys weren't getting enough exercise and needed an outside interest such as athletics.

A new man at this sort of thing, Goulsby says now that he likes the idea. "I'm in favor of it," says Goulsby, who hopes to field a football team next year. "Response of the boys has been excellent and 18 of the 50 boys enrolled came out for basketball."

Goulsby cautions, though, that it is still the chief interest of the school to prepare the boys scholastically. Athletics are secondary, but Goulsby wants to go ahead with the experiment, so the boys can keep up their health by means of athletics.

Coached by John McDonough, a George Washington U. graduate of last year, the boys are operating under a handicap, since they have no facilities at the school. They practice at the Y.M.C.A. and use that as their home court.

In two games, Prep has beaten Fort Myer, 54-37, and lost to the Georgetown Freshmen, 49-43. McDonough still has some tough foes ahead of him in two games with the G. W. Frosh, one with Navy Plebes, and another one with the Georgetown Freshmen.

He thinks, though, that his boys will give all those teams a tough time of it— if they don't beat 'em.

AAU Reinstates Sprinter Conwell, Ex-U. S. Champ

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Eddie Conwell, nationally known sprinter, has been reinstated as an amateur runner after a year's suspension.

Dietrich Wortmann, president of the Metropolitan AAU, said Conwell's application for reinstatement was approved last Friday and was effective immediately.

Conwell, former National AAU 60-yard champion, thus is eligible for the forthcoming indoor winter track meets.

He was suspended in 1949 when he tried out for a halfback post with the professional Buffalo Bills of the defunct All-America Conference. He testified, however, that he did not receive any contract or any pay for his tryouts.

New Yorkers Take 3 of 4 ERA Places

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (AP).—Three New York Giants right-handers—Jim Hearn, Sal Maglie and Larry Jansen—dominated the National League pitching scene in 1950, both in earned-run average and in winning percentage, according to official averages released today.

Toiling for a third-place club, Hearn posted a glittering E.R.A. of 2.49 to lead the pack in what generally is considered the final gauge of pitching excellence. Maglie, the returnee from the Mexican League, ran him a tight second with a 2.71 mark.

Ewell Blackwell, Cincinnati's rubber arm, deprived the Giants' great trio of a clean sweep by placing third at 2.97 per game, but Jansen came next at 3.01 to make it three out of four for Leo Durocher's slick curvers.

Maglie, who began the season as a relief pitcher, posted the highest winning percentage with his 18 victories and four defeats for .818, followed by Hearn's 11-4 for .733. Hearn was obtained from the St. Louis Cards in mideason. Jansen's 19-13 won and lost record landed him in ninth place.

Maglie posted the year's longest winning streak, going through 11 straight games from July 21 to September 21 before his string was snapped by the Cincinnati Reds on a rain-sodden field.

The former Mexican Leaguer also led the league by winning every one of the 12 complete games he pitched.

High School Team Makes Mistake of 'Knowing Score'

COHOES, N. Y., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Bethlehem Central High School lost a basketball game in an "overtime" period while on the way home Saturday night.

Bethlehem was playing Cohoes High and left the court at the end of the regular game thinking it had won, 42-40.

While the Bethlehem players were showering, the scorekeeper rechecked his book and found the score was tied at 42-42.

By the time the officials went to look for the Bethlehem men they were gone. Cohoes took to the court anyway, scored a field goal against phantom opposition, and won 44-42.

Swift Co. Head Opposes Lids On Meat Prices

By S. Oliver Goodman

Holmes

John Holmes, Swift's president, in his annual report to stockholders, said price ceilings and rationing would "discourage livestock production, lose valuable by-products from which health-protecting medicines like insulin are produced, and divert meat away from normal channels."

Discussing prospects for 1951, Holmes said the food supply picture is good. Beef should be in somewhat better supply and pork supplies should rise about 4 percent, he predicted.

While meat supplies will be larger, he added, demand will also be up next year. More jobs, higher wages, overtime payments and less of other things to buy will step up demand he asserted.

His report noted that net earnings for the 1950 fiscal year were the smallest since 1945. Net earnings for 12 months ended October 28 totaled $16,142,586, equal to $2.73 a common share. This compared with $25,826,129 or $4.26 a share in the 1949 fiscal year.

Sales in the latest year amounted to $2,214,819,268, against $2,213,160,242 in the preceding year.

BIGGER BONUS: Washington Loan & Trust Co. distributed Christmas bonuses this year one third larger than in previous years. The extra pay was passed out at a Christmas party in the Shoreham Hotel, attended by 230 employes, officers, directors and members of their families. Presiding was Ross Totten.

HEADS APPRAISERS: James D. Skinner was elected president of the Washington Chapter, Society of Residential Appraisers, at the annual meet- last night in the Burlington Hotel. He succeeds Allan B. Elliott. Skinner has been associated with Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association since 1940 as chief appraiser and last year was made an assistant secretary. Serving with him as chapter officials for the coming year are: William M. Throckmorton, first vice president; William W. Mollan, second vice president, and R. Lee Baxter secretary-treasurer.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Dec. 18 (A.P.)—The rampaging bulls had things pretty much their own way on the Board of Trade today.

Opening steady, the market marched up throughout the session, closing in most cases at the day's best prices and at the highest levels for grain futures since early summer, 1948. Soybeans were under the peak registered in July of this year.

There was plenty of profit-taking early, but later in the day this dried up. Speculative short selling appeared to be at a minimum. While trading was active, it did not expand to any unusual degree. There have been more active days this year.

Wheat closed at 1⅞-3⅛ higher, corn 1¾-2¾ higher, oats ⅝ to 1 cents higher, rye 4¾-5⅛ higher, soybeans 4¾ to 5 cents higher and lard 47 to 57 cents a hundred pounds higher.

Takoma Backs 'Grid' System Of Numbering

The Takoma Park, Md., City Council and Mayor Ross Bevill last night approved in principle the "grid" system for the renumbering of houses and renaming of streets.

Details of the system are to be worked out by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Blair Lee, 3d, vice chairman of the commission, said the system will effect between 80 and 90 percent of the houses in Takoma Park.

The council requested the commission to approve a zoning petition of Joseph S. Horning for reclassifying residential property covering about three acres on University la. near Anne st. to light commercial, permitting him to erect six stores there.

Two police privates were appointed to the city's force. They are Thomas . O'Connell, 24, of 4511 20th st. ne., and Andrew Paulas, 25, of 3304 Perry st., Mount Rainier, Md. They will start at $2400 a year.

The council adopted the chart of Maryland's civilian defense setup. Mayor Bevill assigned each of the seven councilmen to submit names of qualified citizens to head the seven different divisions in the defense plan.

An ordinance prohibiting dogs from running loose was passed. Owners allowing dogs on the street without leashes can be fined $5 or sentenced to three days in jail.

A city ordinance was passed providing for a fine of not less than $10 or 30 days in jail for careless driving. Another ordinance set up 15-mile speed zones around four schools, providing fines of $10 to $25 for violations.

Marshall Directs Buying Speed-Up For Defense Plans

Defense Secretary George C. Marshall ordered the armed services yesterday to speed up their arms buying to turn the United States into an "arsenal for the defense of freedom."

Flashing the "go-ahead" signal for President Truman's emergency military step-up program, he told the Army, Navy and Air Force to cut red tape and rush action on defense contracts, spreading them as widely as possible to get "urgently needed goods faster."

This will open the flood-gates for spending some 42 billion dollars in military funds voted or about to be voted by Congress to rearm the United States and its allies to face the threat of Soviet aggression.

Marshall issued a 10-point guide to military buying, including instructions to avoid concentrating contracts with a few leading manufacturers and to make fullest possible use of small concerns. It also called for "aggressive encouragement" of subcontracting.

Solicitor Convicted In Indecent Assault

Robert Oppenheim, 38, 1631 Q st., nw., a subscription solicitor for the Evening Star, was convicted yesterday of assaulting a Vice Squad officer in an indecent manner.

Oppenheim was convicted by Municipal Court Judge Andrew J. Howard, jr., and sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or serve 30 days in jail. He paid the fine. Oppenheim was arrested Saturday night in a downtown theater by Pvt. Charles F. Klopfer.

Liver Fluke Found in Cattle Of Six Counties in New York

ITHACA, N. Y., Dec. 18 (NYHT). Dicrocoelium Dendriticum, a liver parasite long known in the Old World but first discovered in the United States in 1941, has spread through six New York State counties and is afflicting sheep and cattle in considerable numbers, it was disclosed today by parasitologists of Cornell University.

They said the rate at which the disease is spreading indicates a potential loss of millions of dollars in livestock.

This parasite, a species of liver fluke, has been studied by Cornell scientists since it was discovered at Homer, N. Y., nine years ago. Since then it has spread to Cortland, Madison, Cayuga, Oneida, Onondaga and Tompkins Counties.

The parasite cuts the fecund period of sheep in half and in cattle it renders the liver unfit for human consumption.

Dr. D. W. Baker, professor of veterinary parasitology at Cornell, established that the eggs of the parasite are passed in the feces and are eaten by small land snails. Cows and sheep then east grass and other plants which have been contaminated and the cycle is continued.

It was explained that it will be difficult to control because it is spread by woodchucks and deer and it is impossible to quarantine these wild animals.

Eleven Indicted In Arlington

James Ross, 34, of 3454 S 23d st., Arlington, yesterday was indicted by the Arlington grand jury in the penknife slaying of Robert Barnes, 54, of 2173 S. Oxford st., Arlington.

Among 10 others indicted yesterday was Arnold J. Isbell, 47, of 2918 Wilson blvd., Arlington, on two counts of receiving stolen sewing machines. Police said the two machines were among 43 worth $5000 taken from the Singer Sewing Machine Co., 4036 S. 28th st., Arlington.

Also indicted were Francis Ace Stinnette, 26, of 732 Lamont st. nw. on a charge of illegal posession of marijuana, and John L. Pratt, 24, of 1601 8th st. nw. for the November 9 slugging and $15 robbery of a 58-year-old Arlington man.

Apartment Blaze Drives Tenants Out Into Street

A score of tenants of an apartment house at 1829 Summit pl. nw. fled to the street in their nightclothes in subfreezing weather early yesterday when a small fire spread smoke through part of the building.

The fire, which apparently started from an electric blanket, was confined to the basement apartment of Herron T. Flack. Capt. M. J Fanning of No 21 Engine Company, said the small blaze was quickly extinguished and damage was slight. No one was injured.

Girl Wins Essay Contest

Miss Odette Delean of Notre Dame Academy won first prize yesterday in an essay contest sponsored by the W.shington Chapter of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Announcement of the winners in the patriotic essay contest was made by Col. Alfred C. Oliver, jr., president of the society.

Miss Delean's entry, "The Role of Education in America," was selected from 150 essays submitted from parochial, public and vocational high schools in the Washington area.

Miss Delean, 1209 21st st. nw., won $50 a first prize. Earl Bauer, 5440 Taussig rd., Sunnybrook, Md., won second prize, $25, and Miss Jean Patoka, 1525 S st. se., won third prize, $15.

Heavy Truck Tax Increase Urged in Md.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 18 (A.P.)—A new tax on large motor trucks was proposed today by the State Tax Survey Commission which said they are not paying their fair share of the cost of Maryland highways.

The commission headed by Richard W. Case recommended that a tax of 2 mills per ton for every mile traveled in Maryland be paid by trucks weighing more than 25,000 pounds.

At the same time, it recommended that persons moving here from other States be exempted from the 2 percent tax when they transfer their automobile title certificate.

The commission, making its fourth report in three days on State taxes, said the new mileage tax on big trucks should bring in four million dollars a year. Its previous recommendations on gross receipts and State income taxes would have decreased annual revenues $1,575,000 if adopted.

The commission said "large motor trucks are contributing to the Maryland highways proportionately less than other classes of highway users and are receiving relatively greater benefits than such other classes."

The commission also proposes elimination of the retail sales tax on gas and electricity which now brings in $1,500,000. Changes in the gross receipts taxes would make up $175,000 of that loss.

The commission urged elimination of the sales tax on gas and electricity because it is a "tax on a tax" and "singles out consumers of gas and electricity for special discriminatory tax treatment."

The commission said gas and electric companies were able through their rates to "shift to the consumers the entire burden of the gross receipts they pay," making the customer subject to two taxes since he also pays a retail sales tax. It also pointed out that gas and electric utilities are the only ones collecting a sales tax.

As to gross receipts taxes themselves, the commission said its original impulse was to eliminate them entirely, but decided to recommmend:

1. Reduce the rates charged railroads and telegraph companies.
2. Raise the rates for gas and electric companies.
3. Eliminate the taxes by safe deposit and trust companies.
4. Railroad revenues derived from express or parlor cars or sleeping car companies should not be counted as operating revenues for purposes of the tax.

Guatemala Asks American Talks On Asylum Issue

Guatemala asked the council of the Organization of American States yesterday to call a meeting of all American Foreign Ministers to consider the question of diplomatic asylum.

Guatemalan Ambassador Antonio Goubaud-Carrera, who represents his government on the council, formally requested the conference in a letter to OAS council President Hildebrando Accioly of Brazil. The question will be considered Wednesday.

Goubaud-Carrera said his government was asking for a review of the asylum question because it fears the case of Victor Raul Haya de la Torre—involving Colombia and Peru—is threatening continental peace.

Haya de la Torre is a Peruvian politician who was granted asylum in the Colombia Embassy in Lima in March, 1949. The two countries have squabbled over the case since then.

ALL KINDS men's clothes

Walter Winchell . . . In New York

Notes of a Newspaperman

Nostradamus was never more clairvoyant than the authors of "World Aflame," a book written in 1947. The authors, Engel and Piller, sub-christened it: "The Russian-American War of 1950" . . . Look at these excerpts written in 1947!

"My newspaper ordered me to Korea. It looked as if there would be plenty of action in the East . . . At almost the same time the Red army had moved against our half of Korea . . . A few days after arrival there were signs of a new Soviet move in Korea. Red scouting planes were frequently sighted. Prisoners were taken from several newly arrived Soviet divisions . . . Although Korea is heavily industrialized, the northern half is covered with thick forests and we were unable to observe the Red Army concentration. (That's what MacArthur recently reported!)

"The Russians struck along the railroads from Southern Manchuria, which converge on Seoul. Our forces had been re-inforced, but the Russians now had a margin of 3 to 2 in men. Their superiority in artillery was even greater.

"Next the Soviets drove southward along the secondary railroad running through Central Korea. They advanced 70 miles to a small town named Chushu. With Chushu in their possession they had virtual control of South Korea communications. Four days later, General Morgan (our Korean commander) told us at a press conference that he would probably have to give up the campaign. Off the record he said that, in his opinion, there was nothing to be gained by further resistance here.

"'I guess I'll lose my stars, or worse,' he said, 'but I now contemplate issuing orders to prepare for evacuation. I've got to pull my divisions back now if I am going to save them'. Unfortunately the General had called the turn. Another Soviet offensive backed us into a semi-circle 80 miles wide, centered on Fusan, the Korean port closest to Japan. Only the remarkable skill and super-human heroism of our rear-guard enabled our outnumbered troops to reach the Fusan area without decimation. From Fusan, thanks to the proximity of our strong Japan air bases and the Navy, our withdrawal was orderly. 183,000 men were taken out of Korea without major incident . . . The withdrawal from Korea, however, had cost us our biggest foothold on the Northern Asiatic mainland.

"I found the men on the beachhead speculating candidly about their chances, now that Korea was gone. They had been through some of the most grueling punishment of the war to date. Their beachhead was about the size of that at Anzio in the Second World War and they had clung to it under equally heavy attack . . . No less than 57,000 men had been rescued, to live and fight another day. Their fate had really been sealed two months before, in Korea . . . In Tokyo I pieced together the whole story of the evacuation. I learned those few days had cost us 53,000 of the 110,000 men."

Almost the exact number of U. S. casualties in dead, wounded and missing! And Engel and Piller wrote it in 1947!!!

The President's declaration of a national state of emergency has the people wondering what they can do to help the country . . . What you are asked to do may not look like very much, but it is a great deal when you multiply it by 150 million Americans . . . For example: All housewives are urged not to hoard anything. If 32 million families save only 1 ounce of sugar every 24 hours—it will save the Nation 1000 tons a day and two ships a month . . . If these same 32 million families save only one slice of bread every day—that will supply an army of two million men.

Business and labor must remember that every penny they do NOT overcharge will save the U. S. Treasury $2 per year . . . To mothers of infants: Even saving the extra nipple on the baby's bottle is enough to supply tires to the rolling units of an entire division of troops.

Fighting a 20th Century war calls for more personal discipline than mass bravery . . . On the home front every man and woman is his own commanding officer, but all of you are just as much on duty as though in the front lines . . . In a national emergency you never question your orders—you obey them . . . Whether you are at the controls of a jet plane or at the kitchen sink . . . Saving an ounce of fat from your frying pan is as much an order as charging an enemy machine-gun nest.

Surely the Government—with the armies fighting every minute in the 24 hours—isn't asking too much of you back home when it asks for four more hours of work a week . . . But that's what adds up to the Big Wallop—six million new workers overnight fighting for the men at the front . . . If we could create an army that size as fast—the emergency would soon be over . . . Don't try to measure how little you are doing for your country, but let your conscience multiply it by 100 millions—if you aren't doing what little you can.

The controversy over a new book attacking the FBI and J. Edgar Hoover is argued again in the new Saturday Review of Literature . . . N. J. L. Pieper, who served with the G-Men in 1934-35, says in part: "The author devotes two thirds of his book to the Dep't of Justice's Investigative Unit from 1908 through 1924. This is all before Mr. Hoover became director. Yet he implies the activities of these years were chargeable to Hoover and G-Men of present day stature.

"The author makes a cheap implication when he holds out that the FBI wants to tap wires because it is too lazy to do its investigative work. He cites a California kidnaping. The facts here are clear in my mind. I was responsible for handling that case. The kidnaper was apprehended and the child returned unharmed, because no single effort was spared. I asked Mr. Hoover for authority to monitor the telephone. He went to Attorney General Jackson. Here is the Congressional Record quoting Representative Hobbs of Ala.: 'Our great Attorney General did not hesitate. He immediately authorized interception of the call. He assumed full responsibility.'

"The President and the Attorney-General make policy. The FBI's wire-tapping policy was established by Franklin D. Roosevelt in a 1940 directive . . . Attorneys General Jackson, Biddle, Clark and McGrath have since adhered to this policy, which was re-affirmed by President Truman."

The wildcat trainmen's strike is over, but this is the damage it did . . . It paralyzed all the States east of Lake Michigan and north of the Ohio River . . . It would take 50 Russian divisions to do that . . . It tied up the Potomac Yards, including the Pentagon mailcars—and any Russian aviator would win Stalin's personal decoration for doing that . . . Cities as far south as Dallas and as far west as L. A. started to close their factories . . . Let's call it what it really was . . . It wasn't a strike. It was a blitz . . . It wasn't wildcat—it was outlaw.

Worker Kills Self, Injures Woman With Dynamite

STOCKTON, Calif., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—A construction worker killed himself today and critically injured a woman friend by blowing himself up with a stick of dynamite as he lay on a bed in her apartment.

Mrs. Abbie Miramontes, 53, told police that Charles Ebb Mitchell, 45, came to her apartment early this morning and complained of feeling sick. She told him to lie down on her bed, she said, and placed a cold towel on his head. She then went into the kitchen to make some tea and returned to the bedroom to see how he felt.

"I put my lefthand on his forehead and then he just blew up," Mrs. Miramontes said. Police said that Mitchell apparently had concealed a stick of dynamite under the pillow and detonated it with a flashlight mechanism.

Mrs. Miramontes' left arm was torn off below the elbow. Mitchell left a suicide note reading: "I hope Abbie's friends will be satisfied. I am going to blow myself up and maybe Abbie too."

Union Trying Officials For Red Affiliations

NEW YORK, Dec. 18 (U.P.).—The Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Bartenders International Union (AFL) today began a closed trial of 13 local officers accused of Communst affiliations.

The 13 have been suspended as officers in New York Local 6.

146 Border Incidents Laid to Tito Neighbors

BELGRADE, Dec. 18 (AP).—Yugoslavia tonight accused her four Communist state neighbors of aggressively perpetrating, "at the dictation of their Russian masters," 146 border incidents in the last six months.

Borba, official newspaper of Premier Marshall Tito's Communist Party, said Romania's border guards topped the list with 55 incidents. Others accused were Hungary, 50 incidents; Bulgaria, 25; Albania, 16.

Christmas Blow At U. S. by Soviet Termed Possible

CONCORD, N. H., Dec. 18 (U.P.).—Retired Admiral Miles R. Browning, New Hampshire's civil defense director, said today that if the Russians attack the United States they may do so on Christmas day.

"I feel that the Christmas holiday this year represents the most crucial and dangerously critical instant in the crisis which has been building up since last June," Browning said in an interview. "The peril in which we stand today is going to be immeasurably greater this weekend."

Browning, chief of naval operations in the South Pacific during World War II, said the Russians may strike on Christmas because of the psychological advantage.

If there is no attack this weekend, Browning said, the threat of war with Russia will diminish as the United States gains in strength.

Religious Clash Fears Spread In Singapore

SINGAPORE, Dec. 18 (AP).—A rising fear swept through Singapore today that Communists intend to fan the bloody bitterness over the fate of a 13-year-old Dutch girl into a widespread clash between the Mohammedan and Christian worlds.

Some consider this view a bit far-fetched, but British colonial authorities here were worried enough that they arrested six left-wing Moslem leaders today—a step that carried the threat of new outbreaks in this strongly Moslem community.

In a pre-dawn raid, police jailed Mohamed Abdul Karim Ghani, president of the Singapore Moslem League, and five other Moslem leaders. Ghani himself is considered left-wing but anti-Communist.

The others arrested were Mohamed Taha Bin Kalu, former vice president of the left-wing Malayan Nationalist Party, which was banned by the Malayan government shortly after the outbreak of Communist terrorism there; Dr. Burhanuddin Bin Mohamed Nur, an Indonesian left-winger; Syed Ali Al Attas, Mohamed Mustaza and Darus Sheriff.

Ghani had begun to collect funds and affidavits to support the appeal of a Malay nurse, Che Aminah, against a Singapore court decision that 10 days ago awarded custody of little Maria Bertha Hertogh, reared for the past eight years as a Moslem and wed to a Moslem school teacher, to her Dutch Roman Catholic parents.

The nurse claims the mother, Mrs. Adeline Hertogh, who is part Indonesian, gave her the child during the Japanese occupation of Java in 1942, where the father, Adrian Hertogh, was then serving as a Dutch army sergeant. An appeal in the case is scheduled for March.

The court order restoring the child bride to her mother set off three days of bloody riots in which 17 persons were killed and 159 injured.

Capitol Hill Bereft Of Stamps (Nonrubber)

By The Associated Press

If that Christmas card from your favorite congressman is late it's not due to political forgetfulness after election victory. He just couldn't buy stamps on Capitol Hill yesterday.

At Capitol postal stations long lines of congressional secretaries tried vainly to buy stamps. They were told the unexpected rush after the railroad strike and mail embargoes had wiped out the supply.

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (U.P.).—Four-year-old Johnny Temple appealed to officials to have deer hunting stopped before Santa Claus' reindeer were shot.

Skunk Came to Dinner

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (U.P.).—Owners of a lusty boxer dog invited friends to dinner at their home, but the guests scattered in all directions when the dog walked into the dining room with a skunk in its mouth.

Just Not Lovable

It's a Canard—Milt Is Still Insufferable

By John Crosby

THERE WAS a scurrilous rumor going around the corridors that Milton Berle has become sufferable. This was bellatedly investigated and can now be pronounced a base canard. Uncle Miltie—the man, not the horse—has made spirited attempts the last year or so to become loveable, which would involve a personality change almost as profound as that of Dr. Jekyll. He hasn't quite made it, though beads of perspiration stand out all over him in the attempt.

Crosby

This essay at lovableness has been made in various ways. Most important, though, Uncle Miltie has adopted the children of America as his special province. What the GI is to Bobe Hope, what charity drives are to Eddie Cantor, childhood is to Uncle Miltie.

That makes Uncle Miltie a target almost as difficult to hit as the Germans around Cassino. Artillerymen couldn't hit the Germans without hitting the monastery. Children, charity and GIs are all sacred subjects. Criticize Berle and you're against childhood. One word about Hope and you're hindering the war effort.

IN THE CASES of Berle, Hope and Cantor, I hasten to say they are all very likely dominated only by the highest motives. However, the public ought to be warned that some comedians have been pushed into embracing lofty causes of one sort or another by agents whose concern with, say, the suppression of snakebite is entirely a matter of money.

When one of their properties, as comedians are known in the trade, faces starvation through lack of employment, a livewire agent may take the property aside and say: "Look, stupid, we must be for something." He then explains as delicately as possible what a snake is, most comedians thinking that a snake has two feet and inhabits the upper floors of the R. C. A. Building.

Presently you'll find the comedian ending his program with a one-minute attack on snakehood. And send the two dollars to the Anti-Snake League, a new organization of which the comedian is honorary chairman.

WELL, it's a fairly harmless, though hardly disinterested, game and it raises a couple of bucks to combat snakes. The trouble is that there are only so many causes and most of them have been gobbled up long ago by other comedians. Motherhood was pretty well retired from the lists by Al Jolson. Bob Hope owns the G. I.'s. Cancer, heart disease, communism have all been spoken for.

That left little except childhood for Berle, who came to the feast late. It wasn't the happiest choice but it was just about the only one. Emotionally, psychologically, every way, Berle and childhood seem antipathetic. Even on my 10-inch screen, Berle regards the children and the children regard Berle with what appears to be ill-concealed distrust. Both, I think, have good reason. In our family, we use Uncle Miltie as a threat. If the little so-and-so doesn't go to bed this minute, we'll make him look at Milton Berle. That sends him, scampering.

The Season's Favorite Drink

Spice Meets Spike in Recipes for Yuletide Eggnog

By Lucia Brown

THIS CHRISTMAS BOWL IS FILLED WITH SMOOTH EGGNOG, TOPPED WITH MERINGUE AND NUTMEG

CREAMY RICH, FULL OF SPICE—and "spike," too, if you wish—eggnog is the most popular of Christmas drinks.

It owes its name to the "noggin," a measurement once used for beverages. In old England, it was applied to a particular kind of strong ale. For centuries now, though, it's been most commonly identified with the Yuletide mixture of egg, cream, sugar and "flavoring."

Today's nog maker has some short cuts available. There's the delicious mixture made by the dairies and sold by the bottle. All this needs is the spirits of your choice if you want an alcoholic nog. Of course, you can top it with whipped cream, too, for extra richness.

CONCENTRATED ICE CREAM mix (the kind sold in 10-ounce cans for making refrigerator ice cream) can also be used in eggnog. It makes an economical, rich-tasting nog, since you use milk and not cream with it. To make enough to serve 25, beat 5 egg whites until stiff, then gradually beat in 1/3 cup sugar. Set aside and beat 5 egg yolks thoroughly.

Gradually add beaten yolks, 1 quart milk and 1 tablespoon vanilla to contents of one 10-ounce can of ice cream concentrate. Beat well and add a pint of bourbon—if you wish. Smoothly fold in egg white meringue. Pour into punch bowl and sprinkle with nutmeg.

BEAT YOLKS OF 12 EGGS WELL. Add 2¼ cups of sugar and continue to beat well. Add 1 quart good brandy and 1 pint of Jamaica rum, alternately and slowly. To this add 3 quarts of heavy cream and fold in 6 beaten egg whites. Beat remaining 6 egg whites very stiff and add 1 cup powdered sugar. Then stir lightly into this 1 quart of cream and fold this mixture into the other ingredients.

Let stand from 6 to 12 hours in a cold place before serving.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Married 20 Years, Man Says He'd Die If He Lost The Wonderful Sweet Woman Who Is His Wife; Yet He Takes Cruel Delight in Denying Her Happiness

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I love my wife more than anything in the world and I want to be everything to her, but as time goes on I feel a growing resentment towards her. We have been married 20 years, but I don't believe I have ever possessed her. I don't believe she loves me or ever did. I am firmly convinced she married me for money, although she is good to me; always tender and kind.

When we met, I was a postgraduate student, well off financially. She was everything I wanted—pretty, intelligent, sparkling. When I proposed she said she had rather planned on marrying someone older—someone too wise and kindly to be critical of human imperfections—but knowing me had changed her mind. So we married and began a wonderful life. I used to tease her a lot and ask, "Why did you marry me, Jeanie girl?" and she would say "I married you for your money; of course your brown eyes had something to do with it." This I found very amusing for she cared so little about the trappings of wealth.

Then I lost every cent, and everything we owned, and I have been broke ever since. Jeanie's large family hadn't known great wealth, so cutting corners wasn't new to her; but losing this money just about ruined my life and I almost went crazy in the aftermath. Once when I threatened to end it all Jeanie said the world hadn't stopped just because there was no money. She said, "I refuse to let this ruin the natural pattern of my life." And she set about having her children; and with each baby it seemed she became lovelier. We have seven fine children, who have their mother's merry happy nature, and they think she is the finest person in the world.

Jeanie urged me to take up the profession in which I was educated, but I stubbornly refused, knowing it would take years to get any place. We moved here and I got a factory job that kept me from thinking too much. Meantime she made a connection with a publishing house, whereby she has made money as she wished over the years. Our two elder sons are in the Army now, but many of their friends still come to visit Jeanie and the other children, and the fond admiration of these young men for Jeanie infuriates me. They think too much of her.

And another thing bothers me, though I didn't notice it before. Over the years Jeanie has kept in touch with an old friend from her childhood in Ireland—a doctor carrying on scientific research in the Pacific area. He gets back here every few years and drops in for a visit with Jeanie about the old days; and last week he arrived unexpectedly and found us in the kitchen. Jeanie flew into his arms and as they exchanged greetings I saw the look on his face and I know that he is in love with her. I think he always has been, but I don't believe she knows. I am wondering if the man she described when I proposed—an older man versed in human frailties—could be this doctor . . .

I am getting a deep satisfaction in wiping the happy animated look off her face by saying sharp unkind things to her. She dislikes violence in any form, cannot bear to hear men curse and swear; and now when driving I take delight in swearing at other drivers' errors. I only do this to make her sad. Why am I getting like this? I would die if I lost her; yet some terrible resentment rises in me and I want to hurt her. Can you understand my trouble? I am at the end of my rope trying to figure out my behavior, and will accept and appreciate any advice you can give. P. D.

DEAR P. D.: The real problem, the basic trouble, isn't your ugly attitude towards Jeanie, but rather a chronic fury at existence itself, a hatred of everything and everybody, including yourself—and finally Jeanie, at long last. At first she was the miraculous antidote to your emotional gloom. She brought joy, sweetness, goodness, tenderness into your experience; and you were so gladdened and consoled by her generous love and sparkling comradeship that you almost felt no neurotic rancours for a brief while after marriage. Or at least they faded from consciousness.

But soon you lost all your money, after which even Jeanie couldn't get your chin up again; and I'll tell you why. While you had money, it was your substitute for self esteem. Your early life conditioning had denied you any sure sense of being intrinsically lovable; and you'd learned to count on the prestige of wealth, and the things that money can buy, to render you desirable from a woman's angle. Ergo, in going broke you felt you'd lost your only comehither; hence you became acutely anxious in relation to Jeanie, going to all sorts of neurotic extremes to test her devotion to you and your power over her.

In retreating from the society for which you were educated, and isolating yourself in factory work, you've narrowed your life to a degree where only Jeanie figures importantly in your thinking. Consequently your chronic ferment of resentment is canalized into attacks on her peace of mind. But the whole sorry business goes back to raging frustration and depair you felt in early childhood, when you couldn't get any sense of emotional comfort—of acceptance, understanding, rapport, security, etc.—in relation to parents; and especially in relation to the mother, or those who took her place in your experience.

Obviously Jeanie has loved you dearly, with sorrowful tenderness, but her love has no reality for you, because you are so unloving in relation to her. One must himself be a loving person in order to feel the reality of an intimate's true love for him. You are emotionally sick, on the borderline of serious delusions at this writing; and you urgently need psychiatric help, to gain insight into your childish anxieties and thus get control of them for all time. In conclusion, I congratulate you on having the fundamentally good sense to send out an SOS when so desperately confused. M. H.

D. C. Group Votes Again

Federation Renews Genocide Stand

IN A HEATED debate yesterday, the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs reaffirmed its stand against the U. N. genocide treaty. This pact, which outlaws the killing of a "national, ethnical, racial or religious group," was ratified by 20 nations last October, the number necessary for the treaty to become effective. The United States has not ratified the pact.

By its second negative vote on the treaty, the District of Columbia club remains the only state federation of the GFWC to go on record as opposing the pact.

The District of Columbia club originally expressed opposition in April. Since that time, however, some members felt that the objections to the treaty which had made it unacceptable to the clubwomen, had been removed.

Yesterday's motion to rescind the earlier action of the club was defeated by a 30 to 5 vote.

THE GENOCIDE convention, which grew out of a General Assembly resolution of November, 1945, was ratified by 20 nations October 6, 1950. Neither the United States nor Russia has ratified the treaty.

At present, United States approval of the treaty is in the hands of a Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee, which has recommended ratification with four reservations, or "understandings." These understandings have sought to clarify the aims of the convention, especially in regard to treatment of discrimination in the United States.

Mrs. Herbert Eberhardt of the Mission brought them to the meeting and led the singing.

Friends Were Waiting For Newcomer to D. C.

By Marie McNair

MISS MOLLY CHENEY, who has come from New York to make her home in Washington, found many family friends at the tea yesterday given by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling.

Miss Cheney's mother, the late Mrs. Sherwood A. Cheney, was Miss Louise Delano, sister of the hostess, who died when her daughter was an infant. The late Brigadier General Cheney, Miss Cheney's father, served as a White House aide during the Theodore Roosevelt Administration, came back again as Military Aide to President Coolidge.

After art studies in New York and Paris, Miss Cheney has more recently taken the Red Cross arts and skills course, and is serving at the Soldiers Home as instructor. She finds time to do painting on her own, too, and expects to enter one of her canvases in the forthcoming Corcoran Gallery exhibition.

SOME OF THE Houghtelings' friends from the diplomatic corps were at the party yesterday, but for the most part guests were culled from resident circles with which Mr. and Mrs. Houghteling long have been identified.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Miss Carolyn Nash and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt were at the holiday-decorated tea table during the early afternoon before guests turned to the holiday cup that cheers.

AAUW Group Seeks to End Service Limit

Removal of the statutory limitation which restricts to 2 percent the use of women in the regular armed forces has been asked by the Status of Women Committee of the American Association of University Women in a letter to Defense Secretary Marshall. Transmitted to the Secretary was a resolution recently passed by the AAUW Committee which said, in part:

"The committee feels that this is no time for halfway measures, and that it is unfair to the country as well as to the men of the country not to call upon the women for their services. The committee feels also that this is no time for outmoded limitations and restrictions, but that you should be free to plan and make the best possible use of the abilities and strength of all the people."

The letter was signed by Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, assistant general counsel of the War Claims Commission, chairman of the AAUW status of women committee. Other members of the committee are: Mayor Dorothy McCullough Lee of Portland, Oreg.; Mrs. Marjorie Child Husted, nationally known home economist of Minneapolis, Minn.; Mrs. John Frederick Lewis, jr., member of the board of education of Philadelphia, Pa; Dr. Rosamonde Ramsay Boyd, professor of sociology at Converse College, Spartanburg, S. C.; Dr. Ruth A. Merrill, social adviser for women at the University of Rochester, N. Y.; Mrs. Carl Ettinger of Cedar Rapids, Iowa and Mrs. J. L. Meyers an attorney of Idaho Falls, Idaho.

Way You Look Depends on You

By Evelyn Hayes

THE WAY YOU LOOK TONIGHT — Here is the finished picture after Rod Barron of Helena. Rubinstein has done his skillful work with the new colored eye shadow, waterproof mascara and eye pencil. Rod Barron will demonstrate this and other beauty care at Jelleff's, December 26-30

With party crowding party, this is the time of year that you want to look your best. And the way you look depends on YOU! Slapdash makeup, ditto dressing, never turned out any girl at her glamorous best.

Ceil Chapman, perhaps the Nation's top glamour-dress designer, gives a few simple rules on how to look your best in your best party outfit:

1. Start pampering yourself at least an hour before time to get dressed. Begin with a long hot tub, not a shower. Add bath salts or a few drops of perfume or bath oil.

2. Make sure of perfect grooming—and this means toenails, eyebrows and a makeup foundation, as well as the obvious coiffure, manicure and makeup.

3. No matter if it makes you late for the party, give yourself 15 minutes' absolute rest behind a closed door and in a dark room before you begin to dress.

4. Make up your face, arms and shoulders (very important with bare-shouldered fashions!) and arrange your hair before putting on your dress. Then step into it.

5. Be sure to have pale evening stockings with an evening dress. The whole effect can be ruined by dark reinforced toes peeping out beneath the hem.

6. Never let your vanity lead you to wear too-tight shoes to a party. Your feet may not show much but your expression of discomfort will ruin your face—and your fun.

7. Don't wear "dinky" jewelry. If you have no impressive-looking evening jewelry (true or false!) wear none at all with fresh flowers.

8. Wear a crinoline petticoat under a bouffant skirt. They are inexpensive or can be made at home, and are essential if the new romantic evening skirts are to look romantic.

Experiment Grace

Drooping Hair Styles Belong To the Young

By Ann Lawrence

(Sixth day of Grace's Beauty Program.)

ONLY THE very young can wear their hair in a fly-away fashion, or brushed straight down or crowding the face. For with age, one's face tends to lengthen and the lines of age run down from the corners of the nose to the mouth.

To offset this then, hair must be dressed with an up-and-away-from-the-face movement to achieve the youthful up-and-out look. Pulled back from the temples—not straight back but with a little lift up—your hair will also help to pull up and back the skin that is near your eyes. It amounts to a temporary face-lifting.

Changing your part is another good trick, especially if hair is beginning to thin more than it should. However, if there is a spot where the scalp shows too prominently, go to a hairdresser and ask him to arrange a suitable haircomb. Then keep it.

IF YOU WASH your hair at home, part it on the side opposite to where you usually do. When it's dry, comb it back to the customary place and set it. This does two things: it seems to leave a very special luster on the crown of your head (why, I don't know); and the switch back gives a little height to the wave.

The subject of dyeing hair is a very particular one. Dyeing should be done only by experts. But rinses are easy to handle and if the results are ghastly, can be washed out. We like gray hair, for example, but it can be given an extremely pretty cast with a blue rinse. If your hair is black and turning gray, the same blue rinse will do magical things—giving the black part fascinating blue glints, making the gray part silvery.

HOWEVER, sometimes, as hair begins to turn gray it turns in awkward areas. A streak starting out from the forehead can be most distinguished, the fringes next to the face softening; but a blob on the crown does nothing except seem out of place. This then, is a place that can be dyed—so long as the hairline is left alone.

Henna is a very hard color to live with. Mainly, it serves to make women look older than they are and makes their features seem sharp and harsh. So don't rely on color to give you a youthful crowning glory—instead rely on your hair style.

Ask Anne

There May Be No Yule Snow, But There's Certain to Be An Avalanche of Cookery

WITH CHRISTMAS LESS than a week away, questions about Yuletide cookery have reached avalanche proportions. It's fortunate that homemakers—especially those with jobs, too—will have Saturday and Sunday for last-minute baking and candy-making this year.

DEAR ANNE:

One of my Christmas projects calls for candied lime slices. I have been unable to find them. Can you tell me where I can buy them?

Mrs. Noel W. Scott, Alexandria.

Candied lemon slices, which could probably be substituted for the lime, are sold at a fancy grocery out on Connecticut ave. The telephone number is DEcatur 3366.

DEAR ANNE:

About 10 days ago, you gave a recipe for Chip and Cherry Cake, but did not mention shortening. I made this and it seems rather dry. Is this as it should be, or was the shortening omitted?

Mrs. E. L. C., Williamsport, Md.

No, there's no shortening as such in the Chip and Cherry Cake. It's richness is derived from the chocolate and nuts.

DEAR ANNE:

In what way can I utilize grapefruit and orange rinds? I have in mind recipes calling for rinds only—no juice or pulp of fruit, or very little at least. We have received a gift bushel basket of fruit and it does seem a shame to throw away these rinds.

Mrs. D. U., Washington

You could candy the peel, and include some of it with your assortment of Christmas candies. Such peel can also be used in puddings, fruit cakes, and cookies. Then, too, orange half peels made attractive cases for serving sweet potatoes or fruit cup.

CANDIED ORANGE PEEL

Peel from 4 oranges
2 cups sugar
Cold water

Remove peel from oranges in lengthwise sections. Cover with cold water, bring to a boil, and cook until soft. Drain, saving the water. Scrape out white inner portion of peel with teaspoon and cut peel into thin strips with scissors. Dissolve sugar in 1 cup water in which peel was cooked, boil until syrup threads (232 to 234 degrees Fahrenheit.) Add peel and cook slowly for 20 minutes, or until most of the syrup has been absorbed. Drain, spread on waxed paper, let dry overnight and then roll in granuated sugar until well coated. Shake to remove excess sugar. Store in tightly covered container. For a more moist peel, add 2 tablespoons light corn syrup to sugar in making syrup.

CANDIED GRAPEFRUIT PEEL

Substitute 2 grapefruit for oranges in above recipe. Boil peel 10 to 15 minutes in large amount of water. Drain and repeat three times, cooking last time until tender. Use fresh water in syrup.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a recipe for Tom and Jerry, preferably made with milk. E. G., Washington.

This is generally made with an egg batter and hot water. However, I suppose you could substitute milk for the water in the following recipe if you wished.

TOM AND JERRY

6 eggs
6 teaspoons powdered sugar
3 jiggers brandy
6 jiggers rum
Grated nutmeg
Hot water

Beat whites to a stiff froth, then beat in sugar gradually. Beat until blended, then beat the yolks into the egg whites.

For each serving, pour 2 tablespoons of the egg mixture into a china mug. Add to each serving ½ jigger brandy and 1 jigger rum. Fill mug with very hot water. Sprinkle top with nutmeg.

CHICKEN DINNER

Fried Chicken — Quick Mashed Sweet Potatoes
Green Snap Beans — Salad Bowl
Bread and Butter
Crackers with Cream Cheese and Jelly — Beverage

QUICK MASHED SWEET POTATOES

Ingredients: 1 1-pound 2-ounce can vacuum-packed sweet potatoes, ¼ cup honey, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon white pepper (if desired), grated rind and pulp of 1 orange.

Method: Put sweet potatoes through ricer or food mill. Add honey, salt, pepper (if used), and grated rind of orange (about 1 tablespoon); mix well and spoon into small glass heat-resistant pie plate. Garnish with orange sections cut from orange. Heat carefully under broiler or in moderate oven until very hot. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Try Fiesta Biscuits

To pep up a baking powder biscuit recipe, make fiesta biscuits by adding a small amount of grated, sharp, processed cheese, minced green pepper and chopped pimiento to the biscuit mixture before adding milk.

Avoid Dry Turkey

Warm Water Only

Use soap and warm—not hot—water for cleansing glass shelves and trays in your refrigerator. Hot water may crack the glass.

Christmas Item About Guys & Dolls

Each year Kathryn W. Hughes of 223 Holly st., Takoma Park, Md., tries to collect enough dolls to take care of the charity wards at Children's Hospital.

Last year, with the help of Agriculture Department employes, she obtained 60 dolls and fitted them out in attractive costumes.

But that wasn't enough to go around, and this year most of Agriculture's contributions seem to be going into Bill Herson's box in the cafeteria. Miss Hughes has only 18 dolls, "but there are 183 children in the pollo wards alone. Can't you help me?"

Waker Upper Herson takes his hat off to the fine work Miss Hughes is doing, and tells me that his doll collection is running ahead of last year's. He assures me that he'll have enough dolls to take care of everybody at Children's Hospital who hasn't already received one by Christmas Day.

BAD LUCK IS BETTER THAN NO LUCK AT ALL

I put on my best blue suit as I dressed for work yesterday, and the lady of the house tried to warn me I was making a mistake.

"A man who can invariably bring rain by getting his car washed should not wear his best suit to work," she counseled. "You'll smear it with ink in the composing room or do something equally foolish before the day is over."

"Nonsense," I huffed. "I'm a big boy now, and I'll keep it clean."

What's more, I did. I was so careful that I didn't even get any cigarette ashes on the trousers as I typed my column.

At 7 o'clock I met a friend for dinner in an L st. restaurant. "Hey," he marveled, "look at the guy! He's all slicked up like the poor man's Dean Acheson."

Crash, bang, blootie—and there I was, covered with cream from head to foot. A bus boy carrying a load of dirty dishes had fumbled on his own 5-yard line, and I had been hit with a pitcher of the whitest, clingingest cream you ever saw.

The bus boy apologized, and the manager offered to pay the cleaning bill. A lady at the adjoining table offered more practical help, in the form of an extra napkin.

In thanking her later, I discovered that she was Capt. Maribeth Cardinal, WAC, of 1801 Clydesdale pl. nw. Her husband, Maj. Francis Cardinal of the Medical Service Corps, is with the Ninth Corps in Korea.

"I know just how you must feel," she said. "A very similar thing happened to me, except that in my case, it was a scoop of ice cream—and it went down my back."

"I feel better already," I said. And I really did. I was no longer worried about what my wife would say when she saw my suit, because I was too preoccupied with wondering how Captain Cardinal had gotten loose from that scoop of ice cream.

SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS

Incidentally, a member of the faculty at American University is also sending a tidy sum to the children at the Annex.

His Christmas cards this year are mimeographed penny postcards bearing the usual greetings plus this message:

"This penny postcard carries with it all the sincerity of an expensive card, and it also permits you to participate with me in sharing our Christmas joys with needy children. My cards plus postage last year cost 13 cents each. The 12 cents I am saving this year will be contributed in your name to the homeless kids at the Industrial Home School Annex."

Farm Lobby Cracks Price Law

By Drew Pearson

It looks as if the cost of certain key items isn't going to be controlled very soon, after all.

Price Administrator Mike DiSalle who came to Washington prepared to do a job for the housewife got a rude shock when he read the price-control law thoroughly. For the farm lobby had neatly inserted certain exceptions to price control, and one of them is grain. In brief, DiSalle has no power whatsoever to control the price of grain or any food made from grain.

DiSalle

So DiSalle will have to go back to Congress in January and get the law rewritten.

Aside from this the new price czar has decided that he will not try to control a whole variety of prices, but will stick chiefly to a few cost-of-living items plus basic metals and war production raw materials.

Note—DiSalle arrived in Washington from Toledo, Ohio, to find he had no telephone, no staff, and no full legal power to stop price rises. All he had was a heap of angry letters from housewives. At first he was tempted to buy a return ticket to Toledo, but he has been getting to work at 6 a. m., going to bed after midnight, and is gradually working order out of chaos.

Outguessing the Kremlin is extremely difficult these days, but here is how American experts, trained to do this job, size up the immediate war future:

No. 1—Soviet strategy will probably be to grab off weak and isolated nations one-by-one.

No. 2—Soviet strategy also will be to lure the United States into committing men and resources in a big war in Asia. In this case Russia would throw enough armament into the battle to aid local Communists to hold down American strength.

No. 3—While we are tied up in Asia, Russian armies would drive across Western Europe. The latter move is not expected this year, however. The Kremlin wants to entrap us in other areas first.

Next probable Soviet victim will be French Indo-China, already torn with Communist revolt. Siam, Burma and Malaya would probably follow.

Truman and MacArthur

President Truman came into a Cabinet meetings some time ago carrying a copy of the New Republic, the liberal weekly magazine.

During the Cabinet session, Secretary of Defense Marshall complained about the difficulty of getting cooperation from General MacArthur. He indicated that MacArthur was a law unto himself. Truman listened, finally held up a copy of the New Republic.

Cabinet members, after the meeting, immediately sent for copies of the magazine. It contained an article by former Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes criticizing MacArthur for violating directives from Washington.

Happy Chandler's Tears

Senate colleagues always knew Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler as one of the happiest men in Congress when he served as Senator from Kentucky. But his smile turned to tears at his annual banquet for Major League club owners in Tampa.

Happy had just been informed by his guests that his $65,000-a-year contract would not be renewed.

No one was expected to show up for the banquet that followed, but Chandler went through with it nonetheless. News reports that the party "proceeded without a hitch" were wrong. It started at 8 p.m.—two hours late. All but New York Giants' Horace Stoneham and St. Louis Cards Fred Saigh came. Saigh is reported to be the big gun behind Chandler's ouster.

The unhappy host refused to take his customary seat at the head table but sat by himself with his back to his guests. Several times he was forced to leave the room to wipe his eyes.

Chandler, sitting alone, said he was sitting where he felt he belonged. Once he sent out for a box of cigars and presented them to Joe Cronin of Boston as an ironic gift for Cronin's anti-Chandler vote.

The atmosphere was tense and electrifying. Hardly anyone dared speak to other guests. Branch Rickey of the Pittsburgh Pirates, Cincinnati Reds' Warren Giles and Bill Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs carried on whispered conversations.

"What an unusual feeling. It's ghostlike."

As the club owners departed after the banquet, Chandler shook hands with them. His smile was forced. Each wished him well—perhaps in his next job.

Austin Bows

Philosophical former Senator Warren Austin of Vermont, now United States Ambassador to the United Nations, was sitting in the delegates' lounge at Lake Success the other day, when visitors asked him how he felt in view of the dangerous days ahead.

"We have a lot to go through," Austin replied. "And maybe we will have to bow our heads a bit. It reminds me of a line of Cotton Mather's. He and Ben Franklin were good friends—though in their ideas they were as far apart as the poles.

"Well," continued Ambassador Austin, "once the two were passing through a passage somewhere—a level-beamed place. Franklin bumped his head on a beam. Mather turned around and said to him, 'Franklin, if you will learn to lower your head when necessary, you will spare yourself many a bump.'"

Austin told the anecdote as a symbol of what he thinks may be the necessary policy of the United States today.
